Militarism was a familiar feature of most Igbo pre-colonial societies. The Ezza has been adjudged warmongers, headhunters, and land grabbers which manifested in several Ezza diaspora in different parts of Nigeria. However, beyond warmongering and land grabbing are several other features of the Ezza society which many does not identify. Stereotypes and Realities: The History of the Ezza People identifies the Ezza as an African society with similar characteristics of the Igbo bordering on politics, trade, production, marriage, rites of passage, festivals, etc.

This innovative anthology presents an interdisciplinary approach to Yorùbá culture and customs. Written by Yorùbá experts on all continents, the seventy-five chapters in the volume employ a variety of multi-faceted perspectives to provide a detailed study of the Yorùbá people with insights from anthropology, arts, language and linguistics, literature, history, religion, sociology, philosophy, psychology, criminology, law, technology, medicine, pharmacy, engineering, economics, education, political science, music, theater, popular culture, cultural studies, migration and diaspora studies, gender, etc. Each chapter addresses the changes that have taken place in traditional culture. This blend between traditional culture and modifications to such culture gives a balanced and authentic picture of what can be regarded as culture and customs in present-day Yorùbá society.

$ 45.00 / PB

This book is written to provide information on various aspects of Yoruba, and, indeed, African traditional medicine. The writer's research on Yoruba traditional medicine provides the bulk of the materials in the book. The book consists of eleven chapters. Chapters 1 and 2 provide the background to the book. Chapters 3 to 10 encapsulate the different aspects of Yoruba traditional medicine such as classification of healers, methods of training of healers, methods of diagnosis and investigation of diseases, treatment of diseases, Yoruba pharmacopoeia, midwifery, bone-setting, and other forms of traditional surgery. Chapter 11 describes the meeting point of hospitals and healers; this meeting point, in the opinion of the author, should be how best to serve the interests of the patients. The best form of relationship that should exist between hospitals and healers is also discussed.

Impossibility made Possible is the personal story of Afe Babalola, Senior Advocate of Nigeria, a man who conquers impossible odds to become one of the most influential men in contemporary Africa. He laid bare his rustic background in colonial Nigeria of 1930s and 1940s, dogged by privation and ignorance where he struggled and against the limiting and challenging material circumstances of his birth, clutching at the hand of fate to achieve fame and fortune. This is an inspiring and passionate parable of perseverance, told with self-deprecating candour and shocking simplicity by one of Africa's grand men of modern jurisprudence.

$ 50.00 / PB
766gm.

My Public Service Journey: Issues In Public Policy Administration In Nigeria, is the author's expository work on the Nigerian public service. Bogus and appealing, it narrates the journey of this public servant who rose through the ranks to the pinnacle of his career, serving with distinction as director general/permanent secretary in the presidency during the last 11 years of his 34-year civil service tenure. The book is largely the judgement of an insider peeping into the chambers of the public service from the outside.

This story is not only about a person. It is her story and the story of the worlds that live, lived and died in her. It is a story about books and bridges. To each individual, his or her world is private yet not uninteresting to know. In this private world shared experiences, and also obscurities too. Obscurities are in themselves also not all uninteresting. People are therefore not uninteresting.
Lucky are those whose fate survives in books, bridges, machinery among others.

This unique Festschrift honors the living legend Professor Adebisi Afolayan, unlike most that pay tribute to the deceased. His “village community” genuinely reveres their popular man in both words and actions. This three-part book opens with writings by intellectuals on his interests, then showcases his prolific, versatile contributions spanning English language to musicology. This reveals his relentless pursuit of impactful scholarship. Also, colleagues, family, friends and students provide unfettered praise of this multifaceted nonagenarian – a religious family man, comedian, musician, accessible intellectual juggernaut.

The issue of governance, security and sustainable development in Africa has taken centre stage in the last few decades. This is due to challenges in governance, especially with the general return to democratic governance on the continent, following the global upsurge of democracy that was heralded by the third wave of democracy which started in late 1990s. The euphoria of democracy notwithstanding, the majority of the African citizens are still being denied the expected dividends. As with the end of colonialism in Africa, the hope that there would be good governance, security and sustainable development on the continent with the return of democracy has turned out to be a mirage.

Climate challenge has been a source of conflict in the 21st century. Global temperature is significantly increasing, causing serious flooding, drought, famine and wildfire in many parts of the world, especially in Africa. These challenges lay the foundations for disaster, human insecurity, intergroup conflict and the spread of disease. Biodiversity loss, human encroachment on natural ecosystems, and abuse of wildlife have been associated with the emergence of climate change. The precipitating factors of poverty and conflict are manifestations of the climate challenge, causing ill-health, insecurity, poverty, under-development and conflict. This book is the outcome of multidisciplinary efforts to provide a clearer understanding about the meaning, nature, indicators and impact of the global climate challenge on economic development and conflict resolution in Africa. It also includes adaptation and mitigation strategies to address the effects of global climate challenge.

This textbook represents a timely and essential contribution. It presents an updated and modern version of Nigeria's economic landscape, meticulously analysing the real-world economic situation. Within its pages, readers will find a thorough analysis of trends in the fundamental sectors: Agriculture, Industry, and Services. But this book goes beyond the surface, delving into sub-sectors to provide a nuanced understanding of each domain. Through verbal explanations complemented by diagrams and figures, we aim to demystify complex concepts and empower readers with actionable insights.

LEAP's first publication titled; Defying the Odds: Case Studies of Nigerian Companies that have Survived Generations is the first of its kind in Nigeria. This book profiles seven remarkable organisations, tracing their business histories, spanning 1923 till 2005, and highlighting the fundamental prerequisites for effective succession and business sustainability. From nonprofit organisations to publicly traded institutions, from triumph to tragedy, these case studies highlight the fundamental prerequisites for effective succession and business sustainability in the Nigerian context.

Continuous improvement in productivity has, unarguably, been considered, as the surest way of breaking the vicious circle of poverty. Enhancement in productivity, therefore, is capable of catering for countries' expectations of improving education, health services, private consumption and increased output. Productivity improvement is of great concern, mainly to developing countries characterized by pervasive poverty and widespread unemployment. Consequently, attention is focused globally on what productivity is and what factors could contribute to improvement in productivity.

Contemporary developments and the dynamics of world politics since the post cold war era has necessitated a paradigm shift in security thinking and concerns. This shift has been in the direction of more comprehensive approaches to security that includes human, economic, environment land food security and the integration of national economies, human development and citizen well being into central security concerns. This is why the interrogation of the national economy in the context of national security is important.

This book brings together diverse perspectives on the intricate relationship between globalization, regional economic integration, and their implications for sustainable development in Africa. As the African nations and regional economic bodies of the continent navigate the complexities of a rapidly changing global landscape, the authors of the chapters in this collection of essays delve into the multifaceted impact of global forces on regional economic dynamics. By examining the challenges and opportunities arising from globalization and regional integration, the contributors cast important light on the pathways that can lead to sustainable development for African nations. This book provides a vital insight into the evolving dynamics shaping Africa's economic future within the context of an interconnected world.

Then came the Chinese under the guise of 'friendship'. China's quest to rule the world is the catalyst for its incursion into Africa and other continents through its Belt and Road Initiative (BRI). Under the program, the Chinese have embarked on infrastructure development across Africa in a policy it claimed would produce a win-win outcome for all participants. However, the quantity and sustainability of debt contracted by some African states for Chinese built infrastructure have become a valid concern. Some analysts describe what is now known as China debt diplomacy as a long term goal to entrap African nations in debt commitments they cannot fulfill; with the ultimate aim of leveraging this to obtain resources, commodities and key assets.

The book is therefore intended to highlight the destructive interventionist programs initiated by Beijing to colonize Africa. From all indications, China is not interested in helping Africans to develop their resources. It is in the continent as part of its agenda for world domination.

Nigeria's pension reform can be summarised in two stats. One, in July 2004 when the reform was kickstarted, national pension deficit was N2.4 trillion. Two, by June 2023, accumulated pension assets had grown to N16.76 trillion. It was miserably in the red and now abundantly in the black. That is the Nigerian pension revolution in summary. In the history of economic reforms in Nigeria, pension easily ranks among the most definitive and successful. It has opened up a new economy, creating a cluster value chain, expanding the financial markets and providing funding for infrastructural development. Only the telecoms reform can lay claim to producing more results during the same period.

The phenomenal journey to the success stories of the reform is told authoritatively in this book from a pioneer insider's perspective.

Agro-Terrorism Villains, Victims and Counter-Measures captures different perspectives of threat to agriculture and allied sectors. Global food supply chains are vulnerable to attack by both state and non-state actors through deliberate release of pathogens to destroy plants and animals. Terrorists also use chemicals and Improvised Explosive Devices (IEDs) to attack agro-allied infrastructure, including dams, food processing plants, storage facilities and transportation nodes. In Nigeria, not much is known about the threat of agro-terrorism in the public domain. This is in spite of overt operations of insurgents, bandits and kidnappers that have undermined agricultural production in vulnerable farming communities.

The idea for Thrive took root on Tuesday, March 19, 2024, during the maiden E-commerce and Payment Forum organised by the Lagos Business School's Africa Retail Academy. The forum, which brought together C-suite executives from leading e-commerce businesses across the continent, focused on "Scaling E-commerce in Africa: Intersection Issues in E-commerce, Payments, and Logistics." The high-level discussions that ensued highlighted the urgent need for a resource that could democratise the knowledge essential for e-commerce success in Africa. Thrive is the product of those conversations—a comprehensive guide to empowering businesses to thrive in Africa's unique market. This book is intended for a broad audience, including business owners, entrepreneurs, industry leaders, policymakers, researchers, and anyone interested in the future of e-commerce in Africa.

The book, Cashless Economy-Evolution and Execution in Nigeria, explores the high and low points of a demonetized economy in a fast-paced world drawing from the transition experiences of both developing and advanced economies such as Kenya, Zimbabwe, India, Sweden, and Norway.

While the cashless concept impacts every sector of an economy's business and payments system, empirical evidence has shown that deployment and adoption must follow a well-laid out execution roadmap.

As long as Nigeria strives to sustain her position as Africa's largest economy, the challenges in the implementation of its Cashless Policy identified in this book must be matched with the gains inherent in developing and operating a robust and seamless payments system which is needed to fast track economic growth and development in the 21st century.

This paper explores the relationship between university education and economic growth, focusing on why Nigeria, despite its early potential, has lagged its peers. At independence, Nigeria's economic prospects were on par with those of China, South Korea, and Malaysia. However, while these nations have achieved rapid growth, Nigeria's progress has stagnated. A key factor examined in this study is the quality of university education.

War and Peace in Yorubaland contains selections from the papers presented at the centenary conference on the 1886 Kiriji/Ekitiparapo Peace Treaty which was held at the University of Ife (now Obafemi Awolowo University) Ile-Ife, from 21-28 September 1986.

The volume, while not discussing all the issues connected with War and Peace in Yorubaland. raises and gives a coherent picture of different issues fundamental to the modern history of the Yorubas and aspects of the human 9+-drama that constituted the Yoruba Civil Wars which went on from 1793 to 1893.

There is no doubt that this book is crucial to the understanding of Yoruba history in the last two hundred years. It is the first major effort since Samuel Johnson wrote in 1897 and an essential modern updating of his History of the Yorubas.

Dispute resolution abounds, but arbitration no doubt is the most used Alternative Dispute Resolution mechanism both domestically and internationally. The process of arbitration is used between parties to resolve disputes arising out of commercial/contractual agreements, without the formalities of litigation and regular court procedures. The enhancement of relationships between conflicting parties gave rise to the growth and development of Arbitration as an alternative means of settling disputes. This form of dispute settlement has become very popular because it reduces time and cost which would have been wasted in the process of litigation.

The book contains over thirty chapters on the various aspects of linguistics. From general linguistics through pedagogy to the influence of the social media, as a two-edged sword, on the spread, survival or death of language, this book details efforts of scholars in advancing the survival of language and its usefulness in national development. Other issues of concern related to language are also examined in the book.

ỌFỌ : THE YORÙBÁ INCANTATION [A Textlinguistic Exploration Analysis] is a seven-chapter book that is devoted entirely to an in-depth analysis of the distinctive features and values of the ofò genre, the Yorùbá incantatory poetry. The book adopts a balanced blend of text-linguistic and stylistic canons and principles in unraveling the formal features, communicative functions as well as the mood of a sizeable ofò corpus, all within a broad semiotic ambit. The need to study the function[s] of this poetic art arose from the great importance the Yorùbá attach to ofò as a means to solving their social, political, economic and health problems.

This metalanguage workshop is one of the department's efforts to promote indigenous Nigerian languages.

This book is essentially a product of the workshop. It contains both the addresses that set the pace for the event, the lead papers presented and a collection of proposed terms.

The ingenious assemblage of A Dictionary of Yoruba Monosyllabic Verbs is chief among Chief Isaac Oluwole Delano's contributions to the lexicography of the language. The laborious effort of documenting and entering the unique lexical items into a single voluminous text for the Institute of African Studies of the then University of Ife (now Obafemi Awolowo University) in Ile-Ife is a historical undertaking. No one before or even after Delano has attempted a dictionary of this magnitude, let alone of the Yoruba monosyllabic verbs.

This book studies vowel system of the Hausa language. It particularly examines the morphophonological process of monophthongization of Hausa diphthongs 'ai' and 'au'. It analyses phonetic environment in which monophthongization of 'ai' and 'au' occurs in Hausa and where it does not.

The book reveals that monophthongization in Hausa shows clustering properties involving several features of post-lexical rules. It also distinguishes between phonological alternations that are conditioned by morphology [lexical rules] and those that are not.

African Membrane Drum and Its Notation (Including Exercises on African Drum Rhythms) / Dr. Sam K. I. Chukwu

Nigeria: Prize Publishers Ltd., 2011

64p.

9783718681

$ 10.00 / PB

The African membrane Drum and its notation is a result of many years of practical experience of the author, as a master drummer. The membrane drum is the most populous musical instrument in Africa that is played and enjoyed by young and old. For pedagogical reasons, the author takes the delight in teaching and tabling out basic playing techniques and performance practice strategies that would ignite student's interest in the African membrane drum studies. The author has also developed notational symbols that would ease learner's understanding of the theory and practice of the membrane drum. This book is a guide to students and teachers of the African membrane drum and drum ensembles.

The professional theatre company of Hubert Ogunde has been in existence in Nigeria for over 30 years. In this well documented study of the highly popular and innovative theatrical group, Ebum Clark describes its formation and development from both the historical and theatrical points of view, with particular emphasis on Ogunde's relation to the nationalist movement of the 1940s as well as his various encounters with the colonial authorities who tried to ban his performances.

This study by one of the country's foremost theatre scholars provides a valuable introduction to the understanding of the influences that have shaped the Nigerian theatre today.

The book is about the big issue of the historical and contemporary threats facing the peace, unity and progress of the Federal Republic of Nigeria. There is no gainsaying that Nigeria is currently at a political, economic, social, and developmental crossroads. Poverty is at an alarming rate, several of our roads, electricity, water, aviation and other infrastructure are time-worn, our educational systems keep nose diving, religious and ethnic intolerance are surging; criminality, insecurity, terrorism and kidnappings are at alarming levels. The future of the nation has never been so uncertain.

The term “gates” is operationalized in the Book to mean Nigeria’s land, air and maritime borders, which are serially breached by criminal elements within and outside the country. A similar situation is witnessed in many other parts of the world – most especially America and Europe. That is why Borders

Security is a key campaign issue in different parts of the developed world today.

In a broad sense, the subject "Public Administration" refers to the art and science of managing governmental affairs at local, national and international levels. This can be said to mean arrangements and processes by which the policies, programmes, purposes and goals of government are fulfilled. It is in this line of thought that this book aims at exploring the fundamental issues in modern public administration in Nigeria.

Transhumance and international migration are interfacing themes in the current discourses and narratives of sub-Saharan Africa's development and predicament. While they drive economic progress and development in many ways, they currently underpin some of the very violent conflicts, violent criminality, economic crimes, terrorism, humanitarian crises and xenophobic attacks that the region has experienced in the last few decades. They are products of poor governance systems, poor and unsustainable development management and outcomes, and weak security and conflict resolution architecture in sub-Sahara Africa, and generate immense challenges for governance, peace and sustainable development.

Democratic governance and national security are central pathways and platforms for national development and the achievement of national goals. While democratic governance facilitates citizen participation and mobilisation for development, it also provides a better framework and conditions for national and human security. National security is better guaranteed and sustained when governance is focused on the citizens interests and welfare, provides space for participation and collective decision making, ensures representation, consultation, equity, justice, respect for rule of law and due processes and guarantees human rights, as democratic governments ideally do.

West Africa has become home to quite a variety of security threats and challenges: conflicts, insurgencies, separatist agitations, terrorism, violent extremism, illegal migration, proliferation of small arms and light weapons, human trafficking, illicit drugs and drug abuse. When this reality is juxtaposed with failing state capacities, governance deficits, economic weaknesses and vulnerabilities, social infrastructure and services recession, climate change, increasing populations especially the youth bulge that is regarded as a time bomb, and the debilitations of COVID-19, the correlations appear obvious as do the immensity of the dangers, threats and challenges.

At the heart of Nigeria's development malaise is the failure of governance, essentially accountability and transparency. In "Good Governance in Nigeria: Rethinking Accountability and Transparency in the Twenty-First Century," Dr. Portia Roelofs draws on original fieldwork in Nigeria to argue for an innovative re-conceptualisation of good governance. She offers a new account of what it means for leaders to be accountable and transparent while introducing the "Lagos Model" of governance, which theories 'socially embedded' good governance.

As events have proven, internal political events usually have impacts on foreign policy, Nigeria is not an exception. As it is now well known, the deadly blow to Nigeria's image abroad and its foreign policy that once gave her a pharia status together with the financial difficulty and human rights violations was due to poor management of the policy despite immense efforts by diplomats of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Certainly, there is need to rectify this and improve the activities of the Ministry. History is very important in diplomatic activities, this is the reason for this study. The study is also significant in that it discusses the role of the Ministry from the Colonial period and the evolution of Nigeria's foreign policy. The elucidation of the impact of the activities of the diplomatic elites during the Colonial period to 2007.

Games godfathers play is a vivid account of the political games usually played by the Nigerian political elites to attain the position of leadership. It is Nigeria's experience of godfatherism epitomized by high degree of covetousness of the nation's political godfathers. It explains a specie of corrupt practices by the political elites which is solely to their own benefit and which, since the attainment of Independent, especially during the Fourth Republic has jeopardized the nation's overall development. The Author notes that it shall be difficult to play politics in Nigeria without political godfathers. He however put forward a panacea: the road map to Nigeria's development.

The book examines politics, governments and governance in Nigeria from the pre-colonial period up to the Fourth Republic. It begins with the treatment of pre-colonial states, colonialism and decolonization, and thereafter focuses on politics and governance under military rule and in the First, Second and Fourth Republics. Subsequently, critical institutions of governance and the crises that have pervaded politics and governance received attention. Through selected cases, the book highlights the dynamics of politics and governance, the emergent challenges and what should be done to strengthen democracy, governance and development. The book deploys conceptual, theoretical and analytical perspectives for the analyses of politics and governance in order to provide understanding, explanations and solutions.

Peter Aghogho Omuwie's "No Nigerian Will Make Heaven: Tales From An Aspiring Failed Nation-State" takes readers on a candid and thought-provoking journey through the heart of contemporary Nigeria. With an eye for detail and a passion for truth, Omuwie dissects the socio-political and economic turmoil that has plagued the country since its inception.

He invokes the powerful metaphor of "Mother Nigeria," a self-destructive force that consumes its children and challenges the nation's self-sabotaging patterns. Using various theories, Omuwie questions the very foundation of Nigeria's creation, examining the destructive aftermath of its amalgamation.

This book is divided into three sections in a continuum. The first covers theoretical components [The Study] of religion such as its definition, origin, study and religious symbols. The second examines selected methodological approaches in the study of religion such as Philosophy of Religion, Sociology of Religion, Ethics/Moral Philosophy, and Comparative Study of Religions. The focus of the third section is on selected world religious traditions [The Practices]. Those discussed here are African Traditional Religion, Judeo-Christianity, Islam, and three Asiatic religions. Thus, the book covers issues that are not only current, but relevant and important to students, scholars, and others interested in an in-depth academic study of religion in all its perspectives.

The Advent and Adventure of Christianity in Somorika is the history of one hundred years of Christianity in the community of Somorika, in Akoko-Edo Local Government Area of Edo State. The early converts suffered rejection and banishment. They persevered like the Apostles in the Book of Acts of Apostles. It came through the Christian Missionary Society in 1922. It came with the blessing of education, good healthcare and civilization which are embraced by all today. Darkness and ignorance are fast being driven from the lives of our people. Our sons and daughters at home, in cities in Nigeria and abroad are all doing well. Christianity, a way of life to believers is now everywhere in the community with over fifteen denominations. The details of God's blessings upon the community in the past one hundred years is revealed in this book

At various points in history, believers (Christians) have been tagged 'mad' due to their extreme display of faith and belief in God, usually in dire circumstances. Faith is an important aspect of the Christian life, and this book is filled with accounts of men and women whose acts of uncommon faith paved way for them and their generations, and how the lessons learnt from them can be applied in today's world.

Memoirs of a Mad Man is a book that touches on how to be true ambassadors of Christ. In a world plagued by doubt, deceit, and distraction, it teaches us to build unwavering faith in God. It also guides the willing mind on how best to recognise and utilise God's gifts, and ultimately inherit God's kingdom.

The book first traced the arrival of Anglican Church (CMS) in Nigeria in 1842 which also marked the arrival of Christianity in this country. The author presents to the reader the advent of Christianity in Lagos at the request of the then Governor of Lagos after it became part of British Colony in 1851. It also gives the account of how Lagos Anglican Mission developed and became the headquarters in the latter part of the 19th Century. In 1919, Lagos became an autonomous Anglican Diocese and the seat of the first Archbishop of West Africa in 1951.

The book carefully examine the growth and development of the Anglican Diocese of Lagos till date. This book is a well-researched scholarly work and a detailed reference material for Historical purposes.

The participatory and observational research method is one of the powerful and worthwhile strategies for data gathering on humans and societies, be they developed and underdeveloped. The method is a byproduct of the ethnographic method that was invented by European social anthropologists in the 18th century to study non- literate societies at the advent of colonialism. Ethnographic method is about data gathering through active participation in, and observation of the round of life in of the so-called primitive societies. It is now universally accepted for the study of societies be they primitive or civilized.

This monograph, Noise Pollution: Perspectives on Emergent Religious Bodies in Enugu Metropolis and Environs is, perhaps, the first major formal attempt at bringing to light or rather awakening our consciousness on the extent of proliferation of religious bodies within Enugu urban and its environs with resulting concomitant social and environmental harm. This harm arises, principally, from noise generation as well as disfiguring the zoning plan of affected areas. These often occur as a result of these worship centres springing up abruptly in inappropriate places without prior approval by appropriate authorities.

There is a need to put in place relevant legislation/policies to control the activities of various religious bodies and mechanisms to enlighten religious practitioners on practices that will not jeopardize a serene urban environment.
