The sixteen short stories gathered in this anthology come from various corners of Africa and the rest of the world. Written over the last half a century – right up to the present day – by both renowned authors and those whose fame is now in the making, some published before, others appearing here for the first time, they represent fascinating examples of this widely beloved genre. In the wisdom and beauty of their narrative worlds, the readers discover reality in new and stirring ways, and are memorably reminded of what a great gift it is to live – with pain, struggle, learning, love, joy, and all.

In this landmark biography, Odinge Odera tells his extraordinary personal story – of politics in days gone past, and of his relationship with the legendary father of opposition politics in Kenya, Jaramogi Oginga Odinga.

Odinge Odera's biographical narration of his political life with Jaramogi Oginga Odinga is a well-written, moving inspiring and at times very sad story. It reveals what happened in the lives of two very politically committed people, coming from a generation of nationalists who upheld very high values in fighting for the liberation of Kenyans who sought justice, fairness and dignity in post-independence Kenya. Jaramongi was the patron-saint of these nationalist; men like Odinge were both the ideologues and the foot soldiers of this liberation tradition.
