Yolande Mukagasana is a Rwandan nurse and mother of three children who likes wearing jeans and designer glasses. She runs her own clinic in Nyamirambo and is planning a party for her wedding anniversary. But when genocide starts everything changes. Targeted because she's a successful woman and a Tutsi, she flees for her life.

This gripping memoir describes the betrayal of friends and help that comes from surprising places. Quick-witted and courageous, Yolande never loses hope she will find her children alive.

Decolonisation Pathways: Postcoloniality, Globalisation, and African Development / (Ed) Jimmy Spire Ssentongo

One of the perennial questions in all former colonies is that of how to break the chains in which they are still entangled in various ways long after official 'independence'. Subsequent developments, such as globalisation, continue to make the situation even more complex. Marks of colonial chains are boldly imprinted in many Africans' psyches and relayed in practice in ways quite often contradictory to the continent's development demands. This book is an effort by Ugandan scholars at making sense of the intricate challenges of the African postcolonial situation. It tackles a wide range of areas, including: education, research, gender, migration, cultural identity, and environment. The overarching theme that binds together the different chapters is how to theoretically understand the dynamics behind Africa's colonial history and postcolonial performance/identities in the wake of globalisation. The theoretical analysis is then used to draw out ideas on how Africa can move forward on a self-decolonisation path to meaningful development.

Uganda's Health Sector Through Turbulent Politics (1958-2018) / Prof. Anthony K Mbonye

Kampala: Prof. Anthony K Mbonye, 2018

iv, 156p.

$ 40.00 / PB

394gm.

Uganda's Health Sector Through Turbulent Politics (1958-2018) presents a historical account of some of the key health sector interventions and pioneering personalities in Uganda over the past 60 years. It reveals the intertwined relationship between Uganda's health sector and the turbulent politics that have bedevilled the country. Nothing meaningfully can be achieved in the modern era, without the provision of good health care for the population and individual health. Indeed, good health is a hallmark of social-economic development. This book demonstrates that politicians in Uganda have not always been enthusiastic advocates for the health system—as exemplified by Uganda's independence movements as well as subsequent governments. Furthermore, this book reveals that Uganda's infant and child mortality rates experienced two depressive curves despite overall improvement over the last 60 years: one in the 1970-1980s during Idi Amin's rule, which was beset by social and economic disruptions and poor governance; and another in the 1990-2000s, due to the numerous rebellions that broke out. As a result of this political turmoil, Uganda's successive governments have often expended their budget on politicking and the military, at the expense of investing in social services. Thus, Uganda has suffered from inadequate infrastructure, a shortage of drugs, as well as poor staff remuneration and a crisis in their motivation.

The Dynamics of Identity Politics: Interplay of Ethnicity, Religion and Power in Ankole, Uganda: 1954-1993 / Grace Patrick Boona Karamura

$ 40.00 / PB

364gm.

The Dynamics of Identity Politics is a reflection of Uganda's history from the decade before independence through Milton Obote's two regimes and Idi Amin's bloody regime to Yoweri Museveni's ascent to power following a five-year bush war in Luwero Triangle. This publication is an analytical investigation of the main forces at play in just one of the districts where ethno-religio-political conflicts before and after the British handed over power in 1962. Although details of conflict differed from district to district, the pattern of failure of democracy was the same throughout the country. This is therefore a lesson to all Ugandans of the price that must be paid in the struggle for power that follows when independence is attained but attention and energy are diverted to conflicts of ethnicity, religion and party politics. The beauty of this book is that it records historical events as they were at the time without distortion.

Not Yet Sunset: A Story of Survival and Perseverance in LRA Captivity /
Grace Acan

Kampala: Fountain Publishers, 2017

Xii, 188p.

9789970259366

$ 30.00 / PB

246gm.

When the boys in her class asked her to sit on the ground in the classroom because they felt girls were dull and so only fit for the dusty floor while they sat on chairs, Grace refused to do so, and vowed to struggle for gender equality. As she excelled in school, the war in neighbouring northern Uganda districts was something Grace only heard about, but did not witness. In the early morning of 10 October 1996, this ended. The Lord's Resistance Army (LRA) rebel group broke into her school dormitory at St. Mary's College, Aboke in Apac district, and abducted 139 schoolgirls. Grace was marched to South Sudan where she endured close to nine years of forced labour, hardship and violence at the hands of the rebels. This book is a story of her childhood, abduction and life inside the LRA. Grace never gave up hope of returning to Uganda to realise her dream. She escaped the LRA to resume her education, providing exceptional leadership to thousands of students in high school and university. Not Yet Sunset is a story of survival, resilience, determination and inspiration. Today, Grace is an advocate for the rights of women, children, and conflict-affected communities in Uganda. She has a degree from Gulu University in Development Studies and is currently pursuing a post-graduate diploma in Project Planning and Management. <http://www.marymartin.com/web?pid=656903>

A girl lured from her village into the clutches of traffickers finds herself in prison. After enduring two years in jail, she is finally free and sets out to reunite with her family in Acokara, northern Uganda. But the traffickers are quicker than her and this time they have her sister.

The Zura Maids is a powerful testimony of what creative writing can do as a tool against social injustices. It creatively explores the reality of trafficking in today's global village through the experiences of a young fictional character, Lena Ayugi. This book is a must have for every girl, woman and youth! It's a must have for everyone who is against trafficking of people!

This poetry anthology offers a feast and face of poetry as it currently is in Uganda. It is all encompassing and presents a variety of writers ranging from seasoned voices to new ones of great promise. The voices are adventurous, reflective, provocative and even sassy. The poets explore with passion diverse themes from the private to the public realm reassuring the reader that poetry is about everything and is perhaps everything. The pages of this anthology pulsate with rhythmic variations that give unexpected pleasure and provoke the reader to be exceptionally alert. This is a welcome companion to the Uganda Poetry Anthology 2000.
