$ 20.00

[This book Contains detailed description of three successive stages of Oroqen development – the clan community, the family community and the rural community- as well as many aspects of the primitive life of the Oroqens, such as their hunting methods, marriage customs, burial rites, literature and art, and religious beliefs. The author, Qiu Pu, is a researcher at the nationalities research institute of the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences. He spent six years, from 1956 to 1962, investigating the region inhabited by the Oroqens and gathering a vast amount of data and information about them. This book is illustrated with colour and black-and-white photos graphically recording the Oroqens' life and customs. It will give the reader a comprehensive picture of the Oroqens as they were at the final stage of primitive society.]

[The creators of Chinese folk art come from the working class masses of China's rural areas. They are mostly female laborers. A communal art, folk art would engender all of Chinese literature and all later art. Its presence is evident in every day food, clothing, shelter and transportation; in traditional festivals, ceremonies and rituals, and in beliefs and taboos. As a living example of cultural heritage, it shows the continuity of Chinese culture from primitive society to present. a culture that bears distinct national and geographical characteristics. With this heritage, Chinese culture boasts the longest history and the richest historical sources, and of all cultures, considers itself the most widely shared and the most geographically distinct. Its cultural implication and art form accumulate a historical culture of 7,000 – 8,000 years dating back to primitive society.]

The classic of the Dao : A New Investigation / Wang Keping
Second Edition [1st edition 1998]
Beijing : Foreign Languages Press, 2004
iv, 312 p. : 23 cm.
7-119-02229-6
$ 15.00

[This study project is noticeably characterized by a thematic rearrangement of the 81 chapters along with elaborate annotations and relevant commentary. They are offered as a result of contextual analysis and absorptive incorporation with some of the recent findings by Lao Zi scholars. All this is intended to help one obtain certain insights into the highlights of early Daoism as a philosophy. In addition to that, one may feel reasonably convenient and flexible to select according to one's own interest any of the themes or topics available in the table of contents concerned, and then focus on it for spiritual nourishment, for example. All in all, the work reveals a strong initiative to make Dao De Jing more accessible and intelligible to the readers of all kinds. The intention as such will be largely fulfilled and rewarded by virtue of those who are to benefit not only from scrutinizing the book itself, but also from reading the modern into it in every possible manner.]

China's cultural Relics / Li Li [Translated by Li Zhurun]
China : China Intercontinental Press, 2004
164 p. : ill. ; 25 cm.

Cultural China Series
$ 15.00

[China is the birthplace of one of the four greatest civilizations in the world, hence those cultural relics which, in huge quantities and immensely rich varieties, have always been fascinating.

These cultural relics were produced during different periods of the Chinese history, over well over 7,000 years. They are gems of the Chinese civilization.

This book gives a brief account of 12 types of cultural relics unearthed in China so far, including pottery, porcelain, statues and bronze, jade and gold and silver artifacts. These are seen as the most representative of the Chinese culture, each in its own way providing a glimpse into ancient China.

[In the Chinese way of describing the necessities of life, clothing ranks at the top of "garments, food, shelter and means of travel". In this country with a long history of garments and ornaments, there is a wealth of archaeological findings showing the development of garments, as well as their portrayals in ancient mythology, history books, poems and songs, novels and drama. The distinction not only existed among dynasties, but also quite pronounced even in different periods within the same dynasty. The overall characteristics of the Chinese garments can be summarized as bright colors, refined artisanship, and ornate details. Looking in retrospect at Chinese garments of the 20th century, we see an array of styles of Qipao, Cheongsam, the sun yat sen's uniform, student uniform, western suits, hat, silk stockings, high heels, workers' uniform, Lenin jacket, the Russian dress, army style, jacket, bell-bottoms, miniskirts, bikinis, professional attire, punk style and T-shirt, all witnessing the days gone by..]

[This book takes the reader through the wondrous world of traditional Chinese paintings. Working his way through a vast collection of records, the author classifies the material systematically and underscores for the readers all. As he recounts the long history of Chinese painting, he defines its traditions through the ages, beginning with pictures drawn by early men of the Neolithic period, through the successive dynasties, to modern and contemporary Chinese paintings which have inherited and developed those traditions. He even probes early man's understanding and concept of painting from pictures mentioned in mythology and legends, and painted on unearthed relics. The author provides throughout a running commentary on the representative painters of the various periods, their works and aesthetic views. The book contains a wealth of data of both academic value and common interest. There are 190 illustrations throughout the text of the book. It is a book for the connoisseur as well as the beginner, for people with refined or popular tastes.]

[One of modern China's most moving love stories can be read between the lines of Letters between Two the correspondence between Lu Xuan, China's greatest modern writer, and Xu Guangping, who lived with him from 1927 to the end of his life in 1936. Dattin from 1925 to 1929, the letters were edited by Lu Xun and first published in 1933. Readers can trace in them the gradual change in their relationship: from students and teacher, they become lovers uncertain of their future together, and then a couple expecting their first child. The letters also reveal their thoughts on literature education, politics and their outlook on life.]

From Emperor to Citizen : The Autobiography of Aisin-Gioro Pu Yi / Translated by W.J.f.Jenner

[From Emperor to Citizen is the autobiography of Pu.Yi, the man who was the last emperor of China. A unique memoir of the first half of the 20th century as seen through the eyes of one born to be an absolute monarch, the book begins with the author's vivid account of the last, decadent days of the Ching Dynasty, and closes with an introspective self-portrait of the last Ching emperor transformed into a retiring scholar and citizen of the People's Republic of China.

In detailing the events of the fifty years between his ascension to the throne and the final period of his life as a quiet-living resident of Beijing, Pu Yi reveals himself to be first and foremost a survivor, caught up in the torrent of global power struggles and world conflict that played itself out on the Asian continent through many decades of violence and upheaval.]

[Looking at Beijing within the framework of trees, stone and water is a way of appreciating the city's heritage, based on a special relationship of man and nature. In the process of exploring Beijing's ancient ruins, what I often found as markets of the past were a well or spring, a couple of gnarled pines and sometimes a stele or an abandoned stone cave. They took on the mantle of the sites' history.

It was these three aspects of nature that held Beijing's past. They helped me define and respond to the sites I was searching for. Often they maintained the atmosphere of these places, long after rituals there ceased. They also helped me remember one place from another the gave me their energy. Moreover, they led me to the people of Beijing, who readily shared their knowledge and stories.]

[The Tang and Song dynasties, spanning more than 600 years from the 8th to the 13th century, saw a period of great economic and cultural development in Chinese society. During this golden age of classical literature, numerous masterpieces were written which have exerted profound influence ever since. This collection contains the work of eighteen classical authors, including the major poets Wang Wei, Li Bai, Du Fu, Bai Juyi, Su Shi and Lu You as well as the great prose stylists Han Yu, Liang Shunqing and Quyang Hui. This collection is only a small sample of the voluminous literature of the Tang and Song. However, in its variety, it should prove informative and interesting for specialists and general readers alike.]

[The plays of the Yuan Dynasty are a highpoint in the history of Chinese literature comparable to the descriptive prose of the Han. the classic poetry of the Tang, and the ci poems of the Song dynasties. These plays mostly written by poor scholars, present city life in a style popular with the ordinary townspeople of the time. Therefore, they actually surpass the descriptive prose of Han, the classic poetry of Tang and the ci poems of Song in terms of the breadth and scope of social life they depict.]
