Meige is a long epic of the Yi nationality, which is spread in Dayao, Yaoan, Yongren, Mouding and other areas inhabited by the Yi people in Chuxiong Prefecture, Yunnan Province. The whole epic can be divided into four parts: Creation, Creation, and Marriage He love songs and funerals. It describes the Yi peoples world view and rich imagination of things in ancient times, describes the production and life changes of the Yi people, and shows the customs of the Yi people in love, marriage, funerals, and pregnant relatives. It reflects the economic and cultural close relationship between the Yi people and other fraternal nationalities, especially the Han people in history. The epic poem Meige shows the life and history of the Yi people, which can be called an encyclopedia of the Yi people. The epic poem Meige is an outstanding representative of Yi culture, a vivid sample of ancient culture that survives in the context of modern culture, and a treasure house for the study of ancient Yi culture.

This book is a folk poem widely circulated among the Hani people. It is sung in the form of Hani (traditional song) and passed down from generation to generation. Nuju is Hani language, which is equivalent to pian and zhang in Han writings or repertoires in Han folk art. Twelve slave bureaus means twelve road songs. The translation shows the unique imagination of the Hani ancestors in ancient times, involving Hani peoples knowledge of celestial bodies and nature, human development, Hani history, calendar calculation, four seasons, agricultural activities, etc., and completely reflects the Hani ancestors understanding of heaven and earth. The understanding of formation, human origin, and national migration has the nature of a collection of creation myths and heroic epics, and can be said to be one of the most important literary classics of the Hani people.

The whole book starts from the highlight moment of the Hexi Corridor in Chinese history--the Wuliang period, and describes the Wuliang culture based on archaeological materials, historical records and folklore, taking into account farming and animal husbandry culture, Confucian culture, and Buddhist culture, as well as the Five Liang period. The historical influence of the cool culture constitutes the grand outline and profound volume of the five cool cultures, allowing readers to feel the brilliance of the five cool cultures created by the macro narrative and fine carving of cultural prose. The English translation is guided by readers acceptance, and on the basis of fully understanding and respecting the original text, it uses multiple translation strategies and methods and appropriate discourse styles to accurately convert the language and cultural information of the text. According to the differences between the two languages ??and cultures, it is better to introduce Liangzhou local characteristic culture to English-speaking readers and realize its in-depth dissemination. In Elegant Liangzhou, the author intends to explain the history of Liangzhou in a literary way, that is, to construct a Chinese Liangzhou in a literary way. The traditional culture in the Central Plains has been severely challenged in the wave of commercialism, and Liangzhou is a place that must be paid attention to on the road to the reconstruction of Chinese culture. On the one hand, the value of the English translation lies in the international dissemination of Chinese traditional culture with Liangzhou as the center; on the other hand, it lies in the resistance and subversion of the two centrism concepts. method exists.

This book is the English version of the same authors New Research on the Ancient Clan. A New Examination of the Ancient Clan was published by Zhonghua Book Company in 2000 and republished by the Commercial Press in 2012. The discovery of Tocharian documents and the study of Tocharian and related historical and geographical issues are not only major events in the field of comparative historical linguistics, but also in the academic field of Central Asia. From the end of the nineteenth century to the beginning of the twentieth century, among the fragments of ancient documents unearthed in Northwest my country, some were written in an unknown language at that time, one of which was Tocharian. It poses a series of questions for linguists and historians to interpret. In particular, it must be explained clearly: No matter where the Tocharian-speaking ethnic group originated, since it came to China very early, it should leave its footprints in Chinese history. In other words, under what name did they appear in Chinese historical records? This book is the authors outline of the emigration process of the Wu family, Tao Tang family, and You Yu family based on historical materials, and constructs a hypothesis about the origin of the Sai Zhong tribes. Painter Wang Xijing advocates using spirit and monarch form, firmly grasping eyes, gestures, body posture and important details that are conducive to vividness, emphasizing the distinction between primary and secondary, detail and omission, details in facial gestures expressing emotions and omissions Clothes and crowns are detailed in the characters activities and their expectations and echoes, but less in the description of the environment. In terms of the relationship between the characters activities and the environment, lyrical works often use the creation of artistic conception to highlight the characters modality, and narrative works often use banners or long scrolls in the composition. , he is especially good at dividing space by environmental scenery or interior furnishings, and using the method of repeated main characters to describe the events that happened in the course of time one by one, breaking through the limitation of unified time and space. The brush and ink skills and techniques used in his figure paintings , in fine brushwork coloring, line drawing and small freehand brushwork, more emphasis is placed on the basic role of brushwork, and eighteen strokes were created for this. This book is written by Ni

Na, a student of Wang Xijing, and describes Wang Xijings experiences and works in various periods in the form of biography.

Tracking the Little Green Man is a fairy tale written by Jin Bo for children. It leads children on the path of searching for wonderful life, and it is also a wonderful journey of exploring love, life and green ecology. According to the legend, the little green men are little creatures who love green. They live in nature far away from the crowd. I found traces of the little green man in the green garden of my home. Can human beings and the little green man live in harmony and equality? What kind of secret is my friend Xiaoxiao hiding? When the little green men leave, how will I find them? Jin Bo presented this fantastic journey with immortal childlike innocence and poetic language. Also use the little green man to tell everyone the importance of environmental protection.

The author of this book is Shanghai school writer Shen Jialu. This book is the English version of Shanghai Peoples Food, and it is one of the English version of Shanghai Style Culture Series. This book intends to comment on the eating habits of Shanghainese. The so-called eating appearance literally refers to the behavior, words and deeds when eating and drinking, which shows a persons self-cultivation when eating. Looking at a persons food, you can roughly know the persons family background, education background, experience, personality and principles of life. The concept of this book is broader, and also includes deep-seated issues of food culture, such as fairness, morality, environmental protection, and civilization. The author tries to describe the temper, character, appearance and style of food, as well as their relationship with people, their favor and temptation to people. Finally, through the medium of food, the relationship between people is written. It is helpful to carry forward Shanghai-style culture and tell Chinese stories well.

The giant panda walked on the blue planet for the first time 8 million years ago; the first time humans heard the giant pandas footsteps clearly was in the early spring of 1869, which was warm and cold. From the moment the giant panda appeared in front of human beings, its food and sex has deeply attracted the attention of the world. More than 100 years later, giant pandas are still fascinating. The giant panda seems to have no past, because we don't know who it is. Someone sorted out dozens of names of the giant panda from ancient times to the present, but which one is giant panda? Where are the giant pandas going? Although it has been downgraded from endangered to vulnerable, the number of giant pandas in the wild is still pitifully small. We are trying to uncover the mystery of giant pandas, so that giant pandas can live in harmony with humans forever...

In the practice of afforestation in China, countless stories of typical characters and heroes have emerged. They are the backbone of realizing China's green. The story told in this book is undoubtedly very rare, but it is the epitome of a great practice that clear water and lush mountains are as precious as mountains of gold and silver. What the author captures may be the action of a forester challenging a difficult situation, the conflict of a foresters rebuttal, or the happy smile of a member of society enjoying green benefits.

This is a wonderful book, and its wonder is double - the wonder of the mountains, and the wonders of the animals in the mountains. The two converge in the lens of Ms. Du Feng, integrating a series of graceful chapters. Du Feng's camera records the research and protection of golden monkeys in Shennongjia National Park: establishing a nature reserve for golden monkeys, connecting islands and fragmented forests; providing golden monkeys with appropriate food in winter to help them survive. Severe cold; invite experts to conduct comprehensive and in-depth research on golden monkeys, etc. After a series of efforts, the number of surviving golden monkeys here has increased from more than 400 at the time of discovery to more than 1,400 now. This booklet allows us to know the wonderful golden monkey and enhance our awareness of protecting wild animals. To protect wild animals is to defend our living environment and maintain the common home of mankind!

Poverty is a common challenge for the development of human society. China will win the battle against poverty in 2020 as scheduled, and for the first time in the thousands of years of development of the Chinese nation, it will eliminate absolute poverty as a whole. This will be recorded in history for the Chinese nation and for the entire human race of great significance. What is the background of China's victory in the battle against poverty? What is the theoretical guidance for poverty alleviation? How did the Chinese Communist Partys decision-making and deployment on poverty alleviation come into being step by step? After 2020, how to consolidate and expand the achievements of poverty alleviation and effectively connect with rural revitalization? This book also selects a case from each of the five levels of province, city, county, township, and village to summarize. From these practices, readers can understand how Xi Jinpings poverty alleviation discourse was implemented from the top-level design to villages to households to achieve precise poverty alleviation.

The Sun Rises: American Little Brother Witnesses the Miracle of China's Poverty Alleviation was first published in January 2021 by China Intercontinental Publishing House and written by Erik Nilsson, a senior foreign reporter from China Daily. English version. In the book, the author records the reports of more than ten years of personal exploration of China's poverty alleviation programs, post-disaster relief and overall development, as well as his own stories of actively participating in public welfare and helping disaster-stricken children and families in need during the reporting process. Against the background that China has historically solved the problem of absolute poverty, such a professional journalist from the United States who has worked in China for many years, through this book, tells a story as a person who has experienced it, and provides Chinese and foreign readers with a very unique perspective, highlighting the great significance, great efforts and brilliant achievements China has made in solving the poverty problem in the global context. The author uses frank, optimistic writing and profound insights to tell Chinese stories to the world, and puts poverty alleviation and voluntary actions into practice, changing from a pure bystander and reporter to a participant and witness. After the book was published for the first time, it aroused strong repercussions among readers. CCTV Face to Face conducted an exclusive interview with the author, and many media reprinted the report, which aroused heated discussions among readers.

Materia Medica Chongyuan is a pharmacy monograph annotating Shen Nongs Materia Medica. In the book, the author Zhang Zhicong established the theory of medicine qi, which is the origin of the five movements and six qi, and the principle of the ebb and flow of yin and yang. Therefore, the viewpoint of luck is the biggest feature of Materia Medica Chongyuan, and it is also Zhangs greatest achievement in writing this book. It is well deserved to be the first one to peek into its doorway and enter the room since the Ben Jing. Zhang advocated the principle of Qi in medicine based on the five movements and six Qi, the ebb and flow of yin and yang, and qi transformation and yin and yang are just the summary of the shape, color and smell of medicine, the key to medicine and medicine, and the core of The Classic. What is emphatically reflected and explained in The Book of Ten People on the Classics of Materia Medica. In terms of annotations, this book is theoretically bound to the theory of the five elements, so it is inevitable that there will be some attachments in some places, which is its deficiency. The Yuyen in the large-character annotations in the book should be written by Zhang, while the Yuan in the small-character annotations seems to be Gao Shishis pen. On the basis of the ancient version of Materia Medica Chongyuan, this edition adds an English translation, which is an English-Chinese bilingual version, which is convenient for Chinese medicine researchers, especially overseas Chinese medicine researchers, to refer to.

This book is a scaled-down album version of Ma Xinles famous work The Great Tang Dynasty Scenery Volume. The whole book is full of pictures and texts, both in Chinese and English. The picture is beautiful and stretches for 60 meters. It is like a golden bridge of history, leading readers The moment you open it, you will magically travel to the prosperous Tang Dynasty 1,000 years ago. The majestic volume, excellent painters, bright colors, and colorful picture elements are dreamlike and breathtaking. During the Kaiyuan period, Changan West City was in various poses and with nearly 1518 lifelike characters of the Tang Dynasty. As a masterpiece that may be comparable to A Thousand Miles of Rivers and Mountains and Along the River during the Qingming Festival to some extent, its preciousness is self-evident. It is rare for those who are destined to see it with their own eyes. If the general public wants to watch and appreciate it in its entirety , except for art exhibitions and special events, there are few ways, but this reduced book edition album provides a possibility. In addition to the 60-meter full frame, the book also includes Mr. Chen Peiqius inscription and postscript, Mr. Liao Jingwens and Mr. Zheng Wenhuis recommended prefaces, Mr. Zou Peizhus autograph and other precious words and introductions. cognitive assessments. What is especially rare is that, as one of the few domestic painters who is excellent in calligraphy and painting, as well as in both Chinese and English, all English translations of this book are also completed by Mr. Ma Xinle himself.

In the exhibition area of 23,000 square meters, the National Maritime Museum strives to outline different aspects of the ocean through multi-dimensional display—she is the blue cradle of life origin and an unfinished land that remains to be explored; She is an unshakable blue land and a natural channel to communicate with the world; she is a rich treasure house gifted by nature and an ecosystem that urgently needs to be protected... The identity of the ocean is so changeable that we need to look at it from a global perspective and with humility. It is the mission of China as a responsible big country to explore with a modern perspective, to study with a modern perspective, and to plan with a broad mind. It is also the only way to connect the ocean to the well-being of all mankind. On the basis of systematically displaying the overall situation of the Oceanographic Museum, this book uses multimedia technology to improve the overall readability of the book. Through the system display, it reflects my country's exploration achievements and strength in the marine field.

Ritual is a symbol of Chinese civilization and a sign that distinguishes it from other countries and nations. After thousands of years of acculturation and development, etiquette has become a way of life in China that everyday people use but don't know. From the etiquette, we can understand the Chinese people's value orientation and ethical order; from the etiquette, we can understand the Chinese people's family, country and world feelings and even diplomatic decision-making. Rites in China is divided into five chapters based on the Confucian classic thought of cultivating one's morality, governing the family, governing the country and the world. The diplomatic concept and practice of Waiting for the World aims to let the world understand China with courtesy, and let the world see a different Chinese style through courtesy.

This is a biography of Zheng He, the 15th-century Chinese explorer navigator. Under the orders of Zhu Di, the Yellow Emperor of the Ming Dynasty, Zheng He built a fleet of more than 300 treasure ships, some of which were bigger than football fields. He led seven expeditions to Southeast Asia, India, Arabia and Africa. Some historians believe Zheng He may have sailed to Australia, Europe and the Americas 60 years before Columbus set out to explore the New World. His sailing deeds may be the source of inspiration for the movie The Legend of Sinbad the Sea Hero. The whole book tells Zheng Hes life in plain language, especially the wonderful stories of his seven voyages to the West. The text is easy to understand, vivid and vivid, with a sense of picture, very suitable for children to read, and also suitable for foreign readers who are interested in Chinese history and Chinese stories.

The Spring Festival embodies the deepest emotions and the most simple wishes of the Chinese people, so that the Chinese people will come back on the eve of the Spring Festival and reunite with their families regardless of hardships and obstacles. For many people in modern times, perhaps the Spring Festival has been simplified into a holiday and a few family dinners. However, the meaning of the Spring Festival is not only that. From the beginning of Laba porridge in Laba, the taste of the New Year has gradually unfolded. From the 23rd of the twelfth lunar month, the preparations for the New Year should be officially started. Until the seventh day of the first month, there are daily arrangements and special attention to it. It is the real and mellow Spring Festival for Chinese people.

This book includes Lovely China and Poverty written by Fang Zhimin in prison, with the appendix Chronology of Fang Zhimin's Life. In the article Lovely China, Fang Zhimin summed up the tragic history of China from the May 4th Movement to the Second Civil Revolutionary War with his own experience, and angrily accused the imperialists of wantonly bullying the Chinese people for various crimes. Full of patriotic passion, he pointed out that the only way to save the motherland is to carry out armed struggle, demonstrated that China has the power to save itself, firmly believed that the Chinese nation will be saved from fighting, and demonstrated the brightness of the Chinese revolution at the end of the article. The foreground depicts the beautiful and happy future of the motherland after the revolution, shows strong national self-confidence, and expresses his boundless love for the motherland. Poverty is a passionate eulogy of the noble qualities of the communists who are willing to be poor, expressing the love and hatred of the older generation of communists, and answering what is real poverty and wealth, what is the greatest joy in life, and what is a revolutionary. The great belief of the people is that how people live is valuable.

Civilizations are colorful because of exchanges, and civilizations are rich because of mutual learning. The comparison of Chinese and Western civilizations can not only enable China and the Western world to deeply understand each other and accurately understand themselves; it can also temper the common values of mankind and promote the construction of human destiny community. This book is the English version of the first volume of Mr. Pan Yue's Comparison of Chinese and Western Civilizations series, focusing on the politics of the Warring States and Greece period, and deeply analyzing the roots of Chinese and Western civilizations through the fate of thinkers such as Xunzi and Aristotle. The comparison and comparison have profoundly demonstrated the necessity and significance of exchanges and mutual learning between Chinese and Western civilizations.

Chinese civilization has a long history and has lasted for thousands of years without cessation. This book explains the endogenous power that created China, a super-large-scale civilized country. Starting from the historical context, it puts forward China's resilience as the main thread that runs through China's political structure and ideology and culture throughout the past dynasties. He also believes that this consciousness is also an important link to maintain the consciousness of the Chinese nation community. On the basis of comparing the different characteristics and causes of Chinese and Western civilizations, this book examines several important historical nodes and periods - the changes of Yin and Zhou, the changes of Zhou and Qin, the changes of Tang and Song, the changes from Yuan to Qing, and the changes from ancient to modern. Sort out the historical context of the great unification country, and then explain the profound historical background of the socialist system with Chinese characteristics and the national governance system, and provide useful support for sticking to the bottom line of the consensus that the land cannot be divided, the country cannot be chaotic, the nation cannot be dispersed, and the civilization cannot be broken .

This book is a work based on the authors more than 30 years of legal teaching experience. It introduces the basic structure of law to law students and the general public in concise and plain language. Starting from the basic way of legal creation, the author disassembles the laws of different departments horizontally, extracts the basic elements of legal composition, analyzes how these elements interact and exert their effectiveness in statute law, case law and regulatory rules, and further reveals the legal factors. how it gets complicated, and the errors and confusion that arise from it. Based on his own experience, the author clarifies the common elements contained in the complicated legal rules in a simple way, and frankly points out which ones are crucial, which ones are superficial, and which ones cause mistakes and omissions. The whole book uses a deconstructive approach of positivism to help beginners straighten out their legal thinking and open a door to understand the essence of law.

The selected content of this book is scientifically classified, rich and varied, and fully reflects the artistic achievements of Chinese poetry in the Tang Dynasty. The translation of this book is of high quality, with accurate sentence structure, flexibility and precise choice of words. The translation should first express the meaning accurately, and then use the sentence structure and vocabulary changes to reflect the rhyme and rhythm, which fully reflects the translators' language skills and cultural accomplishment, and the translated poems are very readable. After the translators of this book have a deep understanding of the narrative, reasoning and lyricism of the original text, they first solve the problem of ideological exchange, and then focus on the expressive force of the art of writing, rather than emphasizing form and rhyme, because rhyme harms meaning. From the perspective of reading and dissemination, this is worthy of praise. At the same time, the translation notes are clear and play a very good role in cross-cultural communication. From the perspective of readers, this translation is easy to be accepted by readers, especially foreign readers. In terms of academic value, the translations in the book can be used as translation examples for researchers to study and study. At the same time, it is commendable that many translations in this book are the first translations at home and abroad, which have original value. In short, the translation is of high quality and will have a positive impact on the reader circle and the academic circle.

This book is a collection of poems. During the epidemic, the author no longer travels on business, and the scope of activities is reduced to the village where he lives. She went out for a walk almost every day, walked through the avenue, day after day, through spring, summer, autumn and winter. She began to focus her life on herself. Happiness, sadness, grief and indignation, as well as longing for her homeland, always lingered in her heart. In this book, the author uses beautiful rhetoric and simple affection to describe his perception of life in his early years, and records peoples longing for homeland, relatives and friends, and the old days in a foreign country, full of philosophical thinking and imagination.

This book conducts detailed textual research and research on the ancient documents and materials related to the Silk Road in the East and the West, and seeks mutual confirmation of documents in different languages, so as to confirm the historical facts of ancient East-West exchanges. The whole book is divided into three parts, the first volume, the second volume, and the attached volume. It has detailed textual research and unique comparative research on ancient Chinese and foreign books such as Mu Tianzi Biography, Illustrated Records of the Western Regions, History, and Geography. The research scope of this series is the history of Central Asia from the sixth century BC to the sixth century AD. There are various original materials for the history of Central Asia in this period, among which Chinese materials are undoubtedly the most critical. It can be said that without Chinese materials, the history of Central Asia during this period cannot be constructed. Scholars in the West (including India and Russia) have been studying the history of Central Asia during this period for a century and a half, with remarkable achievements. Its main shortcoming is that it does not make full use of Chinese historical materials. Compensating for this shortcoming are Japanese scholars. Counting from Koji Shiratori, at least four generations of scholars have devoted themselves to the study of Central Asian history during this period, and their main feature is the use of Chinese historical materials. It is a pity that Japanese scholars seldom translate their works into English, and most Western scholars do not know Japanese, so the relevant achievements of Japanese scholars are rarely cited.

Guwen Guanzhi was selected and edited by Wu Chucai and Wu Tiaohous uncle and nephew during the Kangxi period of the Qing Dynasty. It takes the time as the classic and the writer as the latitude, and arranges it in order from ancient times to the present. It selects a total of 222 ideological works from pre-Qin to Ming Dynasty. Articles with relatively high quality and artistry are mainly prose, and also include parallel prose, including Confucian classics and historical prose, as well as biographies, letters, debates, and even travel notes and fables. The selected essays reflect the extreme achievements of ancient Chinese prose. It has high achievements, and has been popular for its collection of famous essays, moderate length, and appealing to both refined and popular tastes. When Wu Chucai and Wu Tiaohou in the Qing Dynasty selected and compiled this collection of ancient prose, they believed that this book is a collection of ancient prose, and it is beyond observation. This time, the full text of Guwen Guanzhi is collected and published in Chinese-English bilingual form, presenting the development and characteristics of ancient Chinese prose.

China is one of the earliest nations in the world who know how to use colors. There are moving colors everywhere in the four seasons, solar terms, heaven and earth, and life. Our ancestors extracted colors from nature and used them in porcelain, clothing, painting, architecture, etc. Every aspect of life forms the Chinese color that has been handed down to this day. Plum dye, blush, rouge, moon white, light cloud, green wave, beauty festival, pomegranate skirt...every name about color sounds beautiful. This book seeks and extracts 48 traditional Chinese colors from ancient Chinese paintings, together with the corresponding Chinese-English version of ancient poems, to create an ancient and elegant style. The combination of ancient colors, ancient poems, and ancient paintings fully embodies Chinese aesthetics, vividly depicting the beauty of poetic grace and abundance.

Professor Zhang Zhizhong, the English translator of this book, has been engaged in the translation and research of Chinese-English poetry for more than 20 years, and came to the conclusion that poetry cannot be translated, but can only be recreated. Re-creation is manifested in two aspects: one is the language of translated poetry, and the other is the form of translated poetry. In terms of the language of the translated poems, the translator borrowed or adapted the expressions in English sentences in several places, endowing the translated poems with a mellow English flavor. In terms of poetic form, the English translation adopts the funnel style, which is the result of years of exploration by the translator and brings readers a novel aesthetic experience.

This book collects the key terms of Confucianism from the perspective of comparison between Chinese and Western philosophies. Each entry first gives the English equivalent, then uses Shuo Wen as the basis for exegesis, and finally interprets it in English in combination with Confucian classics. The purpose of this book is to correct the misreading of Chinese culture in the West. The author believes that: Chinese and Western thought traditions each have their own unique set of philosophical vocabulary, which is self-explanatory in their respective cultural semantic environments and cannot be directly translated into each other. In the process of mutual translation, there are a lot of cultural asymmetry misreading and misjudgment; (Religious Liturgy) etc. Therefore, it is difficult to achieve effective communication only by word-to-word translation.

The Marxist Review (English version) focuses on a rigorous scholarly study of an appropriate approach to Marxism. The research has a strong sense of problem and reality, and is oriented towards solving a certain problem in the academic field or in the real world. The book includes 8 articles by Chicara Sasaki, Zhang Wenxi, Guo Zhan and others. Chicara Sasaki analyzed that from the perspective of contemporary Marxist thought, Engels Dialectics of Nature is extremely important, because todays modern natural science and technology based on Marxist thought plays a vital role in it. However, for a long time, the academic circles have misunderstood the editing principles of the book and various translations. Chicara Sasaki felt the need to respect the scholarly attitude of the books first editor, David Ryazanov, who considered the book to be essentially an unfinished work. We must also reflect on the original meanings of various terms such as materialism and dialectics by Marx and Engels, and return to their original meanings to help us realize that Engels intention is to dialectically criticize natural scientific materialism and social Darwinism. doctrine. Zhang Wenxi believes that historical materialism is the only doctrine that takes a serious critical stance on the legal basis of capitalism and its common well-being.

Promoting the building of a community with a shared future for mankind is China's plan to improve the global governance system. It is also a blueprint for the world based on human history, reality, and development trends. It is the only choice for planning the destiny of mankind in the 21st century. The reason why the community with a shared future for mankind is the right way in the world is that this plan is not for the benefit of a country, but for the sake of mankind; it is not for the benefit of the moment, but for the sake of future generations. Building a community with a shared future for mankind has innovated the way of thinking of global governance, opened up a grand vision of world order, marked the future direction of China's diplomacy, and opened up a new form of human civilization.

In the evolution of the past dynasties, China has formed an extremely rich, systematic and distinctive national governance system. This book analyzes this structure from three aspects: ideology, system arrangement and method application. In terms of ideology, thirteen basic concepts are summarized, covering the most basic ideas of ancient Chinese governance, involving views of nature, world, morality, values, ecology, governance, etc. In terms of institutional arrangement, the editor summarizes four institutional systems. In terms of method application, nine methods have been refined, which are not only the classic wisdom of ancient Chinese statesmen in governing the country, but also the basic cultural character and way of thinking that Chinese people have accumulated and formed in the long historical process, and are the most typical of Chinese people. ethos.

This book introduces the literature records and interpretations of the thoughts of equaling the noble and the humble, equalizing the rich and the poor, and replenishing what is lacking. At the same time, it shows that these equal thoughts are contained behind the contemporary concept of governing the country. From the perspective of the relationship between the three, equal high and low and equal rich and poor are two different manifestations of more than what is damaged to make up for what is not enough and is the specific application of the selfless law of heaven; more than what is damaged to make up for what is not enough is The theoretical basis and guiding ideology of equaling the rich and the poor and equalizing the rich and the poor is a manifestation of the selflessness of the way of heaven. Therefore, in the two chapters of equaling the rich and the poor and equalizing the rich and the poor, we focus on writing the specific governance system and policies that include the concept of equality; Benevolent government and other aspects describe the metaphysical way of governing the country.

Appointing people on their merits and selecting talents and abilities are the essence of ancient Chinese official administration. This book selects historical stories from classics, history, and Zibu classics for interpretation. The first chapter explains the importance of Renxian, and discusses that whether officials are virtuous or not is related to the prosperity and decline of the country, the righteous and evil work and rest of the monarch, and the good and evil of the people. The second chapter explains the standard of virtuous talents, taking the virtuous person, the filial and honest person, the direct admonition person, and the recommended virtuous person as examples. The third chapter explains the selection of talents, which involves the inspection of talents, the key of recommending talents, letting talents, and the two systems of selecting talents: the examination system and the imperial examination system. The fourth chapter explains meritocracy, and discusses four important aspects in the appointment process, namely, respecting talents, identifying talents, adopting wise men's suggestions, and rewarding talents. China has always followed meritocracy, and the influence of meritocracy continues to this day. Learning the wisdom of selecting talents and talents from history can provide a useful reference for selecting and employing talents today.

Chinese civilization has explored the law of the eternal development of the universe and life since ancient times. From Fuxi's observation of astronomy and geography, he implemented the laws of heaven into gossip symbols and transformed them into human artifacts, guided the ancestors to understand the community of all things in the universe, inspired the common heart, and led the people from ignorance to civilization; Shennong inherited the orthodoxy, Go retrograde in the harsh living environment, taste the herbs and grow the five grains, and realize the stable life of the ancestors; then in the era of the Five Emperors, a country was formed, a people-oriented political system was established, and the ancient great harmony and prosperity were realized, and the Dao was popular all over the world. Later, the avenue also experienced a historical stage of being destroyed, but after the unification of the Han Dynasty, the avenue prospered again, forming a pluralistic and unified cultural pattern that influenced later generations for more than 2,500 years. In the form of stories, this book tells the relentless pursuit of the ideal of Great Harmony by the Chinese nation since ancient times. The Communist Party of China has always inherited and carried forward this avenue of publicity, based on China, proceeding from the national conditions, peoples hearts, and development needs, overcame many difficulties, built a peoples democratic political system, cultivated talents, selected talents and abilities, and continuously realized the development of the community from family to society , from the society to the country, from the country to the world, gather together to build a community with a shared future for mankind, and promote the road to the world again.

This book points out that Taiwan has belonged to China since ancient times with clear historical latitude and longitude and clear legal facts. Resolution 2758 of the UN General Assembly is a political document embodying the one-China principle. International practice has fully confirmed its legal validity and cannot be misinterpreted. The one-China principle is the general consensus of the international community, and it is the proper meaning of observing the basic norms of international relations. There is only one China in the world, and the historical and jurisprudential facts that Taiwan is a part of China are unquestionable. Taiwan has never been a country but a part of China and cannot be changed. The realization of the complete reunification of the motherland is determined by the history and culture of the Chinese nation, as well as by the time and trend of the great rejuvenation of the Chinese nation. We are closer, more confident and capable of realizing the goal of the great rejuvenation of the Chinese nation than at any time in history, and we are also closer, more confident and capable of realizing the goal of complete reunification of the motherland. The countrys development and progress, especially the great achievements of reform, opening up and modernization over the past 40 years, have profoundly affected the historical process of resolving the Taiwan issue and realizing the complete reunification of the motherland.

What are the features of China's national governance in terms of its institutional design? How does China organically integrate the Party, government agencies and diverse stakeholders such as market entities and social organizations to form the governance pattern of "pluralism under one core" and consultative co-governance? How does it fulfill the people-centered idea in all fields and at all levels of national governance? Focusing on those issues, this book analyzes a number of important aspects of China's national governance, including institutional building, administrative system, economic governance, social welfare, social governance, emergency management, ecological civilization, and governance tools. Adopting perspectives of public administration, political science, economics and other disciplines, this book puts forward many new ideas and concepts. It is a key to understanding the “governance of China”.

The English-language reader provides insight into the highly organized work and interaction of digital media and capital at various levels of actors (such as individuals or families in home isolation, scientists developing vaccines, government officials tracking the spread of the virus, etc.) as the global pandemic sweeps across countries. In the process of life, there is an unprecedented reliance on network technology, and the issue of personal privacy and commercial abuse of data has attracted the attention of the international community. However, around the relationship between government and citizens; the control of dominant commercialized digital platforms; the vulnerability of vulnerable groups and the availability of digital resources; cross-cutting social inequality; and the ubiquitous confrontations surrounding the impact of digital technology on peoples leisure, learning, and work. All in all, the confrontation of the world connected by digital media is imprinted in the context of the confluence of pandemic and environmental crisis, and the multiple social tensions and conflicts reappearing in the meantime reflect the fundamental restructuring of the relationship between the state and the digital market, and seriously constrain the daily life of the people.

The Spring Festival is the most important festival for Chinese people. It is also the festival with the richest festivals and customs and the hottest atmosphere in China. The Spring Festival is also one of the symbols of Chinese traditional culture. This book revolves around Happy New Years Eve for the whole family. Through the origin of the Spring Festival, the folk customs of the Spring Festival, as well as the Chinese peoples emotions, attitudes and ways of celebrating the Spring Festival, it expounds that the Spring Festival, which originated from primitive worship and sacrificing to the gods of nature, has been passed down from generation to generation. Chengzhong has formed a unique concept of family and kinship with Chinese characteristics, which has become a cultural gene flowing in the blood of Chinese descendants. It is precisely this kind of inheritance and continuation that makes the Spring Festival the most important traditional festival for people and an important carrier of the great theme of returning home and reunion.
