Yunnan through foreign students' Eyes - Volume 3
$ 35.00

[This third volume is entitled Arts in Yunnan. It includes papers that concern a wide variety of what are often considered arts, a commonly used term that actually becomes problematic under careful scrutiny. For the purposes of this volume we have chosen to include three general categories of arts, the Martial, the medical and the fine. Martial arts topics discussed include Gongfu, Taijiquan, and the art of falconry in Lijiang. Medical topics discussed include Qigong, traditional Chinese Medicine and Tuinna Chinese massage, as well as Tibetan and Dai medicine. In the area of the fine arts this volume includes articles that discuss such diverse subjects as the Yunnan school of Art, Dai dance, Lisu music, Naxi literature, a search for "living cultural treasures" in Yunnan, and a few works of creative writing and poetry.]

Architecture

Vanishing tradition : Architecture and carpentry of the Dong minority in China / Klaus Zwerger
Bangkok : Orchid press, c2006 xi, 212 p. : ill. ; 30 cm.
Includes bibliography and index.
974-524-061-3

[A recent commentary lamented the 'blind destruction of national architectural heritage and fanatical building of cloned property developments, despite of lack of market need't occurring in China today. Professor Zwerger's exploration of the unique wooden architectural tradition of the Dong minority peoples who inhabit the rugged mountainous regions of South-western China thus captures, perhaps just in time, a heritage most likely to disappear in decades to come, as it is overwhelmed by China's rampant modernization. The author discusses the historic development of Dong architectural techniques as affected by the social and physical environment of Dong communities, as well as by the agricultural and forestry practices of the Dong people. Both residential and public buildings are described and analyzed and all types of structures are illustrated in many striking images. Vanishing Tradition is a valuable resource for china specialists, students of traditional architecture and general readers interested in the impact of the unprecedented changes ongoing in China, on traditional crafts and ways of life.]

[The great Song Dynasty poet and artist, Mi Fu (1051-1107), entered official life as secretary of the board of rites and court painter. He founded a school of painting characterized by its bold and vigorous brushwork, and yet delicate in the composition of its exquisite landscapes. Besides writing poetry, critical essays and colophons, Mi Fu left important treatises on painting and calligraphy, in addition to the present work on ink-stones, translated here by the eminent Dutch diplomat and Sinologist,

Dr. R. H. van Gulik. In the case of the case of the first two works, the subjects of Mi Fu's deliberations have long since disappeared. There remain, however, numerous surviving examples of ink-stones from the Song and earlier dynasties, enabling us to compare Mi Fu's words with the actual objects he describes. The importance of the ink-stone as an essential tool of the Chinese literati and thus the importance of our understanding its nature to our overall comprehension of Chinese brushwork, is but one aspect of the present work. The ink-stone is, in addition to a tool, a work of art in its own right, combining the skill and wit of the sculptor with the ancient Chinese tradition of appreciation of beautiful stones. In this translation of Mi Fu on Ink-Stones, Dr. van Gulik provides not only a guide to the connoisseurship of this essential treasure of the scholar's studio, but also an illuminating glimpse into the mind of this brilliant eleventh century artist.]

[This book aims at developing an understanding of the various contracting and control issues faced by the multinational enterprise. Emphasis is placed on the theoretical determinants of external contracting and the management control of multinational operations. These issues are illustrated with examples and 18 case studies of actual multinational and regional firm operations in China. In particular, you will be able to:

- a) appreciate various theoretical determinants of international business contracting strategies and the organizational structures that complement those strategies;
- b) appreciate the cost/benefit trade-offs that are associated with the various contracting arrangements of foreign direct investment in China;
- c) appreciate the significance of various managerial accounting and control techniques that can support the various forms of contracting that are used by foreign multinationals in China.]

The Lenovo Affair : The Growth of China's Computer Giant and its takeover of IBM-PC / Ling Zhijun ; translated by Martha Avery
Singapore : John Wiley & Sons (Asia) Pte. Ltd, c2005
376 p. ; 24 cm.
Includes Index
0-470-82193-0
$ 31.00

[The Lenovo Affair : The Growth of China's Computer Giant and its takeover of IBM-PC tells the story of the Chinese company that has raised hackles and alarm in the west by purchasing IBM-PC. The book also has an important subtext: how other companies in China are gearing up to go global. Despite extreme economic and political turbulence in China over the past twenty years, Lenovo succeeded in becoming the third largest computer company in the world, with US$ 13 billion in sales. Its hero, and the main figure in the book, is Liu Chuanzhi. As head of the company, Liu navigated dramatic changes in China and managed to marry unique unique advantages of the communist system with specific features of the capitalist system.

Throughout its relatively brief history, Lenovo has relied heavily on Chinese government support. The risks of the company have been defrayed not through shareholders but through taxpayers, the Chinese populace at large. This is a cautionary tale. It is not only about the "Legend of Lenovo, " but also about China, the West, and the future of business in rapidly integrating world. Despite the "Snake eats Elephant Story" of Lenovo's purchase of IBM-PC, the Chinese government still owns controlling interest in the company.]

China CEO : Voices of Experience from 20 International Business Leaders / Juan Antonio Fernandez and Laurie Underwood

[Heading to China? China is a "must win" market for nearly any business with international ambitions. But executives taking up management positions in China often find themselves in a profoundly confusing and chaotic business environment marked by fast change, contradictions, and extreme competition. Who best to advise on cracking the world's fastest-growing and highest-potential market than those already succeeding there? This is the philosophy behind the book China CEO: Voices of Experience from 20 International Business Leaders. The book presents this rich knowledge in a readable, conversational styles suitable for time-constrained executives. Each chapter gives specific advice on how to manage Chinese employees, work with Chinese business partners, communicate with headquarters, face competitors, battle intellectual property rights infringers, win-over Chinese consumers, negotiate with the Chinese government, and adapt yourself (and your family) to life in China.]

vii, 396 p. ; 24 cm.
7-80586-963-4
Yunnan through foreign students' eyes – Volume 1
$ 35.00

[This first volume is entitled Tourism and development in Yunnan. Within are essays that explore the promises and perils that accompany Yunnan's tourism development, including impacts on local peoples and the environments which they inhabit. Others discuss development issues, such as China's reproductive policy, deaf education in Yunnan, rural microlending projects, agricultural change, and music education as a means of inculcating social norms and values. Geographically and ethnographically, these papers encompass a cross-section of Yunnan's many ecological zones and minority peoples. Our intention in publishing examples of our students work is to inspire others to examine the many potential topics of interest in Yunnan today. Future volumes will include minority issues in Yunnan and Arts in Yunnan. We hope that you will find them rewarding and informative reading. Ideally, they may further a greater appreciation for the unique cultural and physical landscape that is Yunnan.]

[This second volume is entitled Ethnic minority issues in Yunnan. It includes papers that concern Yunnan's minzu, her ethnic minority nationalities, including education systems and new models for schools in minority areas, the loss of traditional cultures, including the Dongba shamanism of the Naxi people, preservation and policy in Lijiang, Naxi women and the economy of the Lijiang Naxi, tourism among the Mosuo, impacts on the traditional lifestyles of the Jinuo people of Xishuangbanna caused by the creation of forest reserves and the efforts of the Menglun Botanical Gardens, Dai identity in Xishuangbanna, studies of China's newly instigated village elections, the search for an ancestral home and traditional folk tales by a returned Hmong (Miao) refugee, studies of the Yi, the Zhuang, the Tibetans, and the very notion of identity itself. This volume is a diverse compilation of papers that not only discuss the various ethnic groups involved, but the changes that are occurring in their lives today, in an ever-modernizing and inter-connected Yunnan, China, and the world. We hope that you will find these papers insightful and that they will spur others to examine further topics in the diverse and rapidly changing human landscape and the role of identity formation in both Yunnan and our own lives.]

[This book is the most sophisticated and comprehensive account in English of Macau's evolution. Gunn shows how the territory began as gateway between East and West at the beginning of the emergence of global trade networks, progressed to become a more conventional colony before converging with the economic and social trends in the Chinese mainstream. Now newly updated, it is essential reading for students of the transformation of the South China region." (James Cotton, Professor

Muslim enterprises of China - I / Edited by Wu Xiaojing

Beijing : Morning glory publishers, 2006

179 p. : ill. ; 30 cm.

7-5054-1533-6

This picture album is published in four languages – Chinese, English, Arabic and Hui Language. With both pictures and excellent texts, this picture album records the great changes of Muslim enterprises and the unique experiences of Muslim entrepreneurs, and shows the outstanding achievements in different fields made by Muslim entrepreneurs under the leadership of the party.

The picture album introduces some old famous enterprises with a history of 100 years, as well as new enterprises that emerged to meet the needs of the market economy. Some enterprises have devoted themselves to the operation of traditional trades, injecting new connections to the famous-brand Muslim products; and others have blazed new ways in new – and high – tech fields. Entrepreneurs have worked hard in their respective fields, and some of them have become pioneers in China as well as in the world, playing more and more important roles. But they have never forgotten to serve the country after being rich. They show great concern about public welfare, help the poor people and offer financial support to those with difficulties, displaying their unremitting efforts and upright and kind spirits. They are the heroes of the times and the glory of Muslim. Their achievements fully reflect the party's national policy, and prove that Muslim enterprises are an important component part of the Chinese economy, and a significant force in Promoting social stability, and in building a harmonious society.

This picture album, which provides a rare and good opportunity for Muslim enterprises to display their achievements and promote their images, is actually a broad platform for the friendly exchanges between the Chinese Muslim enterprises and the people in the world. The publication and distribution of this picture album has an important realistic and historical significance in implementing State President Hu Jintao's instructions on further developing friendly cooperation in all fields between China and the Arabic countries, on strengthening international economic and cultural exchanges, on coordinating the strategic decision on the great development of the west regions, on inviting foreign business chances and foreign capital, and on introducing China's Muslim enterprises and Muslim entrepreneurs to other countries in the world, especially to Arabic and Islamic countries, so as to make other countries understand China, and let more Chinese Muslim Enterprises and Muslim entrepreneurs enter the world market.]

[This account of plant hunter and explorer Frank Kingdom-Ward's 1933 expedition to the south-eastern corner of Tibet was as significant for his geographic revelations as its was for the wealth of plant species with which he returned. On this journey Kingdom-Ward reached as far as the Salween River, a particularly remote area of Tibet nor previously known or mapped in the west. His lively descriptions of the grand mountain ranges he traversed, the hardships overcome and the plants, fauna and people he encountered are complemented by spectacular photographs. The recollection of such adventures as his sojourn in a remote Buddhist gumpa, the frontier justice meted out to a suspected murderer and many other tales en route make this a gripping and informative read for the Tibetologist, botanist and armchair explorer alike.]

[Brief Introduction : Shanxi businessmen are the earliest businessmen in Chinese history. Their emergence can be dated back to four or five hundred years ago. In their heyday during the Ming and Qing Dynasty, Shanxi businessmen, as a business bloc was on the top of the ten business blocs in China. Pursuing commercial integrity as their cardinal principal, having the strong backing of abundant capital, and with far-sighted management, they explored a variety of business scopes and markets.

Their business firms covered salt, iron, cotton, cloth, furs, silk, tea and financial establishments, etc, spreading all over the country and even reaching as far as Europe, Japan, South-east Asia and Arabian Countries. They had been holding a dominant position in the business of world of China for 500 years.

As a full coverage of the history and commercial culture of Shanxi businessmen, this 8-part TV series is a representative work of Chinese documentaries. Its vivid story-telling, exquisite frames and simple and pure background music will lead you to feel and understand the traditional oriental businessmen as well as the profound Confucian culture.]

[The history of the Mongol people was forged on horseback, a history full of conquests and achievements, producing the most outstanding hero of his age Genghis Khan. Mounted on horseback, Genghis Khan and his descendents, in resolute, daring and unconstrained style, "wrote" a splendid chapter crossing centuries. They are the Mongol people's eternal pride. Today, the Mongols have come down from the saddle and are advancing hundreds of times faster than the fastest horse that ever galloped over the grasslands. They may not enjoy the same resounding name that Genghis Khan one did, but thanks to their wisdom, they are making achievements that Genghis Khean could never have even dreamed of. Their political, economic and cultural contributions are adding an important page to Mongol annals. They have surpassed Genghis Khan by far.]

[Shanxi province, called "Jin" for short, lies on the loses plateau, a land of varied topography, crisscrossed by gullies, and dubbed a "world created by a crazy god." But, tucked away in this land of yellow earth stand many magnificent ancient courtyards, their owners mostly Shanxi merchants – a unique group of businesses tycoons in China. Through its lively text and illustrations, this book takes the reader through the various courtyards throughout Shanxi, focusing on architectural arts, culture and customs and revealing many old family stories. It brings home to the reader the hardships endured by the courtyard owners when they started up in business, the rise and and fall of Shanxi merchants over the centuries and the political, economic and historical reasons for this.]

[Tianjin, pioneering seaport metropolis, city of inventive past and unique culture. Inspired, perhaps, by the dancing waters of the Bohai Gulf, Tianjin became: a naval pioneer-birth-place of modern shipyards and China's first submarine; a communications pioneer-a post-route to all parts and home China's first railway, postal service, cables and telephones; a cultural pioneer-with China's first university degree, museum, women's newspaper; a financial pioneer with its own "Wall Street," and industrial pioneer with world-class innovations. But pioneering has not obliterated tradition-Tianjin is a city of legend and age-old customs and cuisine-never more so that at Chinese New Year. These elements unite to make the commercial metropolis and major port of Tianjin. With 600 years of unique history and innovation, Tianjin is responding with confidence to the challenges of the 21st century.]

[This study has won scholarly acclaim for its insightful analysis of a little-known area of Overseas Chinese history. It describes educational efforts for the Chinese population of the former Dutch East Indies. Education emerges as a touchstone of Dutch policy toward the non-European sectors of the population. Much attention is given to the differing social and economic status of the totok and peranakan groups within the Chinese population. Government schools are contrasted with the schools run by Chinese organizations. Based on government statistics and a wealth of historical detail, Ming Govaars tells a fascinating story which is relevant to the study of the Chinese in Indonesia, Overseas Chinese affairs in general, and the sociology of colonial societies.]

[This study argues that overt U.S. competition with China for influence in Asia is unwelcome, counterproductive for U.S. interests, and unwarranted given the limited challenge posed by China's rise. U.S. policymakers should not be misled by prevailing assessments that exaggerate China's influence in Asia relative to that of the United States. Washington should resist recent congressional, media, and interest group pressures that employ overstated appraisals of China's rising power in order to push for tougher competition with China. Contrary to prevailing commentaries, the study demonstrates that China's advance rests on a fairly narrow foundation—generally adroit Chinese diplomacy and intra-Asian trade that is less significant than the reported figures of annual trade between China and its neighbours would suggest. China's influence in Asia is undermined by domestic preoccupations, nationalistic ambitions at odds with neighbours, and the adverse economic implications of China's rise for many in Asia.]
