These Wonderful People of Ningxia / Lisa Carducci
Beijing: Foreign Languages Press, 2008
268p,; 23cm
ISBN-13: 9787119054711
$ 19.95

With its 66,400 sq km, Ningxia makes up only 0.69 percent of China's territory. Composed of a plain that is crossed by the Huanghe River and cradled by three deserts in the north and arid mountains in the south, Ningxia is one of the poorest places in the country.

Ningxia Hui Autonomous Region was established in 1958. Its culture and history are strongly influenced by Islam which is practiced by the Hui people, the descendants of Central Asian, Persian, and Arabic peoples, making this autonomous region a land rich in color and variety.

Among the persons introduced in this book, at least seven – as far as I know – would later become bearers of the Olympic Torch in Ningxia. They include the writer Zhang Xianliang, the desert-greening workers Wang Youde and Bai Chunlan, the actress Liu Ping, the Ningxiahong winery president Zhang Jinshan, the president of a residential community committee Sun Xian-mei, and the theater master and pioneer Wang Zhihong.

To the Watchtower: Red Gate Gallery and Contemporary Art in China
Hong Kong : MCCM Creations, 2007
145p,; 22cm
ISBN-13: 9789889926687

$ 38.50

To the Watchtower tells the story of Brian Wallace and Red Gate Gallery, the oldest gallery of contemporary Chinese art on the mainland. Wallace first traveled to Beijing in 1984, and within a couple of years was staging exhibitions for the artists he met there. He vividly describes the art scene of the time, "oiled with energy", but still searching for a public:

Young artists circulated through Beijing with slides of their work, or the work itself tucked under their arm, hoping to connect with people interested in their art. They would exhibit on foreigners' sofas (we called them "sofa shows") or guide the curious to their tiny homes, where the work would take over all the available space...

The book celebrates the gallery's fifteenth year in its iconic setting in the Dongbianmen Watchtower, and chronicles twenty years of Chinese contemporary art. Red Gate Gallery, with its pantheon of leading artists and its respected Artist in Residence Programs, has both reflected and shaped the world of contemporary Chinese art. Lavishly illustrated with the work of nineteen major artists and including substantial critical essays, To the Watchtower is indispensable for anyone with an interest in the Chinese art scene.

"Whoopee! Let's go places and do thing!"

So say the authors of All About Shanghai, the classic guidebook from the middle of the roaring 1930s. With first hand authority and an enthusiasm that is truly infectious, the authors captured and bottled the madness, excitement, depravity and fast bucks of the greatest boomtown the world had ever seen.

Written as a guide for newcomers and visitors, this book today is a fascinating portrait of the old Shanghai in its heyday, enjoying every minute of the ride.

China: The Longest Journey 1850-1949 / Jonathan Fenby
Hong Kong: FormAsia Books Limited, 2008
227p,; 31cm
ISBN-13: 9789889826918
$ 95.00

To fully grasp the astonishing distance China has traversed, from one of the world's earliest and most advance civilizations to the economic giant it is today, one must see the achievement in its historic perspective. China has compressed almost inconceivable change into little more than a century, shedding the last vestiges of old-age imperial dynasties to confront the modern world head on. Even before Mao Tse-tung's Communists came to power, China experienced upheavals unparalleled by any other nation. The dramatic course of those one hundred turbulent years is documented in this extraordinary book, both in words and photographs, many of which have never been published before.
