History

Walking Away From the Killing Fields: How a Hopeless Boy Became a University Professor in Japan / Nophea Sasaki
Japan : Nophea Sasaki, 2008
186p,; 21cm
ISBN-13: 9781434833709
$ 22.00

This book tells a story about Nophea's determination to overcome his childhood's fear and pursue and accomplish his dreams. It is a book about courage, determination and hope. In circumstances that would make most human beings give up the desire of life, Nophea decided he would make a difference. He would leave his fingerprint on this world and will share his story and the fact that even when there is no hope and all seems to be in darkness, with determination and ambition, you can fulfill your most unreachable dreams. This book also explains the reader step by step with real life experiences and examples how to bring their dream to realization.

Much attention has been given to the 'killing fields' of Cambodia, far less to how the country can recover and heal itself after such an experience. Crucial to this process has been the formation of a new moral order in Cambodia and hence the revival of religion in the country. Certainly, the regeneration of the ritual life of a community may offer ways for people to formulate and relate to their collective stories through symbolism that recalls a shared cultural origin. However, this process requires that the representatives of religion and of morality do have credibility and moral authority, something that may be called into question by their past and present involvement in hegemonic political and secular affairs.

The importance of this volume, therefore, is not only that it contributes to the new interest in religion in Cambodia but also because it places the religious revival in a nuanced social, cultural and political context. Moreover, it shows how in large part Cambodia pursues order through reference to her past.

This is, however, not only a book about Cambodia. Its chapters address major questions of interest to a global audience. These include such topics as how a community may be repaired after violent conflict, how religion and politics are interwoven and how moral order and historical change impact upon one another.
