[This book is perhaps the first comprehensive collection of anthropological works in Bangladesh. It brings together several contributions of foreign anthropologists who have worked in Bangladesh and also from some young first generation Bangladeshi anthropologists.

The book also has two specific audiences in mind. The first is comprised of students of anthropology and other social sciences who wish to know and read about contemporary anthropology. The other targets readers who are development practitioners, researchers, administrators, and also decision makers including those want to have a general overview of the scope and state of contemporary anthropological research. The articles in this book will dispel the stigmatized notion that anthropology is study of "Primitive" people and societies.]

[The buildings and built-spaces of the past are a major means of communication with a nation's tradition and heritage. Considering the importance of the issue, the Asiatic Society of Bangladesh, devoted to the study of man and nature in Asia, organized a seminar and exhibition on architectural conservation on April 17, 1993, aimed at generating awareness and understanding of architectural conservation. The seminar paved a way to unite historians, architects, archaeologists, planners and administrators involved in the issue of conservation. This book is a collection of the papers and deliberations of the seminar. Illustrated with ninety four plates and figures, it documents most of the major architectural conservation efforts undertaken in Bangladesh in the recent past. The book will be interest to those concerned with the built-Environment and the preservation of cultural heritage in Bangladesh.]

[This is the second book in the series of a longitudinal study, using both quantitative and qualitative techniques, undertaken by a group of proactive researchers on the budget – making process in Bangladesh with a particular focus on the allocations for the poor. This book highlights the multiple - dimensions of poverty captured through participatory research and goes on to provide a direction for preparing the national budget on pro-poor and decentralized foundations. It concentrates on an issue which is becoming more relevant particularly at a juncture when the issue of poverty eradication is of great concern to the policy makers and citizens both at the national and global levels.]

[The Issue of Local governance presents a peculiar and frustrating paradox for many developing countries, never more so than in the case of Bangladesh. This book explores the above issues in terms of new ideas, innovative methodology and carefully collected empirical evidence, which have strong policy relevance. Based on extensive research carried out by Power and participation Research Centre (PPRC) including a nation – wide survey, this book extends conventional analysis in several new directions; mixed-method approaches, exploration of the notion of community, analysis of Shalish and the nature of social capital. It also explores the new frontiers towards which local government in Bangladesh should move.]

[This book pays tribute to Q.K. Ahmad at 60, a tribute owing to one for his outstanding and inspirational contributions to the development literature that has been evolving, nationally and internationally, over the past three and a half decades. All this while, he has known no rest in his work towards the betterment of the lives of his fellow humans, particularly of the teeming, milling masses, the Miserables who inhabit his part of the vaunted “global” neighbourhood. His central concern has been to persuade movers and shakers in his own country and around the world about the imperatives of people – centered development with equity between nations and among people within nations, without closing the door on the demands of future generations; and this concern of his has led him beyond the pale of Economics to diverse fields of inquiry in search of the right mix of answers.]

People’s Budget : An Illustrative Exercise using participatory Tools / A Study commissioned by IDPAA, PROSHIKA and conducted by Shamunnay
Dhaka : The University Press Limited, c2002
xxiv, 269 p.; 22cm.

984-05-1648-5
$ 15.00

[This book, third in the series, is on the budgetary process in Bangladesh and is written from the perspective of the poor. Based on a participatory research of IDPAA, PROSHIKA and conducted by Shamunnay, the book proposes an alternative framework of a pro-poor, gender – just and environment – sensitive national budget for Bangladesh. The study finds that despite some changes, the current budget – making process is complex, inefficient and non – transparent. It argues for a set of institutions that would be necessary for creating a favorable policy environment for poverty reduction. Using participatory techniques, the book illustrates how the sectoral priorities and allocations can be reoriented within a changed paradigm of participatory development. A Strong case for innovation and renovation of institutions has been made here for poverty eradication. The book addresses the issue of poverty from a perspective which can be particularly relevant given the renewed interest in finding ways and means for its eradication.]

[Research works done mostly by the Bangladeshi scholars on sub-regional economic cooperation are presented in this volume. The studies deal with the prospects and problems of sub – regional economic cooperation, and facilitation of trade and transport for promoting greater economic integration within the sub – region. An empirical study in selected areas on informal trade between Bangladesh and India and included here given an idea how serious a problem it is for Bangladesh economy and also for sub-regional economic cooperation. Findings of industrial case studies on pharmaceuticals, silk, molasses and vegetable oil presented in this book gives a picture of the prospects of these industries and also guides industrialists and entrepreneurs to look for export diversification. A Critical Economic problem of trade imbalances between India and Bangladesh and how it can be resolved have been discussed in some detail in the book and guidelines for further action are suggested.

The book should be of particular interest to policy makers, multinational and multilateral organizations, private entrepreneurs and scholars interested in economic development through cooperation in South Asia.]

Popular Economics : Unpopular Essays / Wahiduddin Mahmud

Dhaka : The University Press Limited, c2002

xiii, 154 p.; 22cm.

Includes Index

984-05-1641-8

$ 15.00

[The essays in this volume have arisen out of the author's belief that economists owe it to the society to try to bridge the gap between expert and lay opinion on economic policy issues and that, in spite of the complexities of economic problems, a minimum level of economic literacy among educated people is both possible and highly desirable.

The book comprises an assortment of articles and commentaries written by the author for newspapers and occasional lectures delivered in popular forums. Mahmud presents these essays with the awareness that there are credible opposing arguments surrounding most economic issues and that there are rarely readymade answers to commonly asked questions on such issues.]

984-05-1496-2

$ 20.00

[The Present work critically examines the annual budgets in Bangladesh with particular focus on the social sector and attempts to capture the perceptions of the poor people.

Based on IDPAA research report, the book aims to illustrate to what extent the poor participate in the budget – framing process and what is their share of the resource allocation in the annual budgets. This is a longitudinal study undertaken by researchers excelling in a new approach towards poverty eradication. It presents an approach that emphasizes the social responsibility of the framers of the national budget. The book addresses one of the most important areas of concern and demands the attentions of those involved in framing and administering the national budget as well as the ordinary citizen.]

[The focus in this book is on the important topic of poverty alleviation, in two relatively undeveloped areas in Asia, namely, West Bengal in India and in Bangladesh. The authors argue that poverty is not merely of great concern to the people of these two areas but also to the rest of the world, especially the developed world, because of its political – economic consequences, including international terrorism. They argue that any effective poverty alleviation programme must involve the political parties. The book should be of interest to politicians, academics, as well as to aid donors and Asian experts in Western Countries.]

[Education watch is a civil society initiative to monitor progress in primary education in the country. The first two watch reports covered internal efficiency and quality of primary education in Bangladesh. This third report from the watch revisited selected parameters of internal efficiency and included two new issues, viz., educational expenditure and literacy. Findings of the education watch have both short and long term policy implications. Bangladesh has to strive hard to ensure quality education for all by 2015. There is hope but the challenges may be daunting.]

Legal Aspects of Marital Law / F.K.M.A. Munim
Dhaka : The Director, Bangladesh Institute of Law and International Affairs, c1989 xi, 293 p.; 25cm
Includes Bibliography and Index
$ 10.00

[The Author has Considered in this book the phenomenon of 'Marital Law' as a concept of the British Constitutional Law, tracing its origin from the remote past and attempting to show its various aspects when applied in different contexts. The English Jurists, while considering its different meanings, described it as not, in truth and reality, a law but something indulged in rather than allowed as a law. Marital Law is seen to operate under a constitution, and as in recent times, in some countries, by abrogating or suspending the constitution. But, in both cases, it contrasts with the normal established legal order of the country. The book makes an excellent reading on Marital Law as a concept and as applied in reality.]

Chittagong : “Rita Court”, 1997
2v.; 25cm
$ 40.00 (Each)

[This book is an objective exposition of the constitution of Bangladesh and based on a conviction that constitutional law is a blend of history and politics. Judicial decisions are its dimensions. The author has distributed the subject by compiling a complete package of constitutional literature along with the latest decisions of the Supreme Courts.

This book includes some extra judicial and extra-constitutional materials which are relevant in the context of constitutional developments in the country.

This informative book in two volumes will be very useful to the Bench and the Bar and the legislators as well. The book is designed not only for the members of the Bench and the Bar but also for students and laymen.]

[These essays show that contrary to the widespread belief, nationalism is not all about the celebration of territory as a marker of identity and power; it is also about time in a fundamental way. The anxiety over time is as fundamental as the one over space. Indeed space appears as one in the distribution of the elements that go into making the time of nationalism.

Therefore in these essays, time before 1947 and after, and the time when icons were not icons and the time when icons lay under the blows of the iconoclasts, lie wrapped in a single format often indistinguishable from each other.]

[The book examines the role of the Caretaker Government and the Chief Election Commissioner in perpetrating a huge electoral fraud in 2001. It identifies the various methods of election rigging and contends that powerful returning officers the deputy commissioners in the districts – can deliver results as they wish. It analyses the strategy adopted by the four party Alliance led by Bangladesh nationalist Party to defeat Awami league in selected constituencies. It documents how the partisan activities of the chief Adviser of the Caretaker Government from the minute of his assumption of office on 15 July 2001 helped rigging of the election.]

[The Eighth Parliamentary elections held on 1 October 2001 were a puzzle in the electoral history of Bangladesh. The Election Day was remarkably calm and peaceful in comparison with violence, tension and threats to voters that had dominated the whole campaign period. The caretaker government, an exceptional institution created for conducting "free and fair" elections acceptable to all parties, faced a touch challenge.]

[This book is provides a performance audit of the structure and functions of the Public service Commissions as well as the quality of civil service management in Bangladesh. Covering a period of nearly thirty years, strengthened further by a reference to the historical and intellectual antecedents that led to the birth of PSCs in the Indian Sub-Continent, it draws on the recent experiences of other developed countries emerging from British colonial tradition.

The study is remarkable in its comprehensiveness and depth. Its most impressive aspect is the compelling, incisiveness and forthright observations on important and substantive issues.]

Confidence Building Measures and Security Cooperation in South Asia :
Challenges in the New Century / Edited by Mohammad Humayun Kabir Dhaka : Academic Press and Publishers Limited, (in association with Bangladesh Institute of International and Strategic Studies), c2002 ix, 498 p.; 22cm.

$ 25.00

[The book deals with the concepts of confidence building and confidence building measures. As inter-state relations in South Asia have historically been characterized by endemic conflicts and mistrust, the book highlights the need for engaging in such a process and adopting such measures that would reduce tensions and build trust and communication channels in the region. The focus of the book has been on how to evolve cooperative relations in South Asia. As SAARC has not yet made any impressive progress, some authors have argued in the book that the approach to and scope of cooperation in south Asia need to be refocused on confidence and security building first and then on socio – economic issues. Finally the book discusses how bilateral and regional CBMs and CSBMs could be institutionalized and strengthened in South Asia.]

[This compilation is to express how the ethnical ideals and arguments can be applied in evaluating social issues as existing in reality. This may be broadly called Applied Ethnics or practical Ethics, which includes Bioethics, Health Care Ethnics, Medical Ethnics, Ethics of Feminism, Environmental Ethics, etc.

We believe this book will help students specially to understand and comprehend the importance of ethnical analysis of social issues. This kind of analysis helps develop an insight into disparity and injustice, our key social problems.]
