Out On A Limb describes how the author, an economics professor, begins a journey in Kota Kinabalu in 1943, on the run from the Japanese. After performing Shakespeare on painted legs at All Saints', sailing coolie class to England, having a war hero for a headmaster, and studying under pioneers of development economics at university, his career as an economist took off.

Inspired by dedicated teachers to become an academic, his postings have taken him from Kuala Lumpur to Melbourne, Brisbane and Hong Kong, with consultancies with the World Bank, Asian Development Bank and UN in far-flung corners of the world.

As a wandering economist, his adventurous journey was characterised by decisions made on a whim and serendipity often taking the lead. The path less travelled was made less hazardous by hard work, the kindness of people and good luck.

This book is a collection of policy insights, articles and speeches by Tengku Zafrul Aziz, who was appointed as Malaysia's Minister of Finance on March 10, 2020, just as COVID-19 began to hit the nation. It provides a glimpse into the inner workings of the Ministry of Finance (MOF), particularly in meeting the nation's demanding fiscal needs, while also contributing to the difficult but ultimately successful fight against COVID-19 and managing the battered economy during the last two-and-a-half years.

Tengku Zafrul and his team faced multiple challenges in navigating the economy through stormy, uncharted waters while setting into motion several much-needed reforms to rebuild Malaysia's strength and resilience. Throughout this unprecedented journey, he anchored his leadership of the MOF based on three key principles – to be RESPONSIVE, RESPONSIBLE and REFORMIST – with the goal of ensuring that the country emerges from the pandemic towards sustainable and inclusive growth.

Poignant, thought-provoking and insightful, Weathering the Economic Storm is a must-read for anyone seeking to understand how Malaysia overcame COVID-19 and how the future of its economy will be shaped from the perspective of one of the nation's rising leaders.

Who was Lorraine Leong? This gripping book narrates the life of a pampered young Cantonese girl born in the rich tin-mining town of Ipoh in the 1920s during British Rule. Growing up amidst her grandfather's family, his six wives and thirty-nine children, Lorraine's life was a mix of the old-world charm and a patriarchal society, infused with Chinese and Nyonya cultures and beliefs of the first and second generation Chinese in old Malaya.

In an era when a woman's value was determined more by the men in her life than her own worth, this book brings awareness to the later generations of the obstacles and prejudice women of the past faced and lived with.

1. Landlord and tenant – Malaysia.

$ 20.00 / PB

330gm.

There is, at present, no specific statute on landlord and tenant in Malaysia. The law is contained partly in the National Land Code 1965 (which applies to Peninsular Malaysia only) and partly in a growing body of case law from this country and other common law countries. This book contains the essential elements of the law, focusing on the rights and obligations the landlord and the tenant (especially the tenant's right to have quiet enjoyment), defaults by tenants and landlord's remedies (especially distress actions and eviction proceedings) and rights of both parties upon termination. The law in Malaysia is pro-tenant, and a specific Landlord and Tenant Act is necessary to provide equal protection to both parties.

Andrew Barber's Fortress Penang, chronicles the story of Tom Baxter, a washed up MI6 intelligence officer who finds himself in Penang just before the Japanese occupation. Set against the Japanese occupation of Malaya in 1941/42 and the British decision to abandon its oldest colony in the region, this novel narrates how Baxter finds himself swept up by a set of powerful historical forces, for which he and the British colonial authorities have little or no understanding, and little answers. One by one the pillars that sustained the colonial rule collapse, finally leaving Baxter a fugitive in what was once proudly known as the 'Pearl of the Orient'.

SCRIPT stands for Sustainability, Care & Compassion, Respect, Innovation, Prosperity, and Trust – six Malaysian values at the core of this living document which both lays out Anwar Ibrahim's vision for a stronger, better Malaysia and provides a method of developing policies fit to the contemporary and increasingly complex world in which we live.

This book builds on Anwar Ibrahim's more than four decades of experience in public service heading key ministries in the Malaysian government, leading various international development and peace organizations, and his time educating at leading universities around the world. Anwar Ibrahim has taken this experience and synthesised it with the thoughts of some of the greatest minds from around the world, and the input of the people of Malaysia he has listened to and learned from throughout his career.

SCRIPT delivers to Malaysians a robust framework upon which future-oriented policies can be crafted with indigenous, home-grown creativity and expertise. It proposes a set of six, core values which must be deeply embedded in the problem-solving process in order to adequately address the increasingly complicated societal challenges facing Malaysia, in an increasingly complex world.

As a policy document it is unique in that it acknowledges the vast repository of wisdom that lies in the minds and hearts of the people of Malaysia and invites them to participate in creating that future. SCRIPT is written in a way to empower all Malaysians to develop solutions that can build a peaceful and prosperous future.

Making Democracy Work: Institutional Reforms for Malaysia / (Ed) Ooi Kok Hin

3. Politics, Practical – Malaysia.

$ 27.50 / PB

580g.

For decades, institutions have been deprived of the capability to provide meaningful and effective check and balance on the executive. However, following the end of dominant party rule in 2018 and the political turbulence that followed, the concentration of power in the prime minister began to be contested as the demand for reforms grew. In Making Democracy Work, Bersih brings together contributions from researchers and experts to study and propose recommendations in four key areas: electoral reforms, parliamentary reforms, public office appointments, and political finance. After the 'Sheraton Move' that led to the collapse of the Pakatan Harapan federal government and seven state governments during a global pandemic, Bersih commissioned a series of research reports to address political instability and the interconnected 'carrots' and 'sticks' contributing to party-hopping. This book is an abridged version compiling some of the reports. This edited volume offers insight to all who share a common interest in making Malaysia a strong, stable and mature democracy.
