Temple - tower in Mỹ Sơn was built and renovated continuously from the 7th century to the 13th century. Architectural art here clearly manifests the characteristics of important styles in the Champa art transformation process. Champa dynasties, after ascending the throne, often built or renovated the temples of the previous kings to pay respect to their predecessors and the protective deities of the kingdom. Normally, the temple and the tower are only restored on the outside wall, while the inside of the tower is preserved. With special values of architectural and sculpture art, along with typical cultural and historical values of the Cham people in history, in 1999, Mỹ Sơn relic was recognized and honored by UNESCO a world cultural heritage. This book introduces readers to the historical, cultural and artistic values of Mỹ Sơn relic.

With the French School in Indochina (L'Ecole française en Indochine, Karthala Publishing House, Paris, 1995), Professor Trinh Van Thao wanted to study French education in Vietnam before 1945, aiming at the purpose of the analysis is to clarify a series of issues that are particularly important both theoretically and practically: The introduction of French education and culture into Vietnam; Influence and impact on Vietnamese cultural and social life; The degree of assimilation, as well as the positive and negative aspects of the process. The book The French School in Indochina was created to assess the long-term effects of the colonial period on the social and cultural status of Indochinese peoples. This book also helps readers understand the attitude and behavior of Vietnamese people towards schools and school career. This book will appeal to those who, whether experts or people, need to understand the country that is both close and far away, which is also the last Francophone battle in Asia.

The content of this book includes a document that records information about inter-provincial examinations held during the Le Dynasty. There are also biographical information of 17072 scholars who have passed these inter-provincial exams. The Confucian court examination system in Vietnam (1075 – 1913) was a system for entry into the civil service modelled on the Imperial examination in China, based on knowledge of the classics and literary style. The exams entered Vietnam during the long era of Chinese occupation and adopted by subsequent independent dynasties as a way of filling the civil service. They were instituted at court level by the Lý Dynasty's Emperor Lý Nhân Tông in 1075 and continued some 1000 years later toward the final years of the Nguyễn Dynasty's Emperor Khải Định. The examinations were suspended by the French in 1913 with the very last local exams occurring from 1915 to 1919, thus making Vietnam the last country to hold Confucian civil service examinations.

Óc Eo Culture is a cultural heritage of the Funan kingdom. The distribution range of this culture is widespread in the South and the northern part also extends to Cat Tien of Lam Dong province. Óc Eo may have been a busy port of the kingdom of Funan between the 2nd century BC and 12th centuries. Scholars use the term "Oc Eo Culture" to refer to the archaeological culture of the Mekong Delta region that is typified by the artifacts recovered at Oc Eo through archeological investigation. Nearly 70 years ago, archaeologists found traces of a rather brilliant civilization, contemporaneous with Dong Son culture at Oc Eo in Thoai Son district, An Giang province. Over nearly 70 years of discovery and research (from the first excavation in 1944 by French scholar Louis Malleret at Oc Eo), the heritage of this unique and famous culture has become more and more evident.

After the event of Vietnamese volunteers entering Cambodia to help the country overthrow the genocide regime of the Khmer Rouge (January 1979), the relationship between Vietnam and ASEAN countries deteriorated, even fierce confrontation occurred in the first half of the 1980s of the twentieth century. It can be said that during this period, the Cambodian issue deeply influenced the relationship between Vietnam and ASEAN. In the second half of the 1980s, along with efforts to find peaceful solutions to the Cambodian conflict, relations between Vietnam and ASEAN improved. Through two meetings JIM-1 and JIM-2, Vietnam and ASEAN countries have worked closely together to find a political solution to the Cambodian issue. In addition to the profound changes in the world and in the region since 1989, the awareness of the common interests of Southeast Asia, the cooperation and development has led to greater sympathy between Vietnam and ASEAN on the security benefits of both sides.

After the 1954 Geneva agreement, Vietnam was divided into two regions. The North was liberated and entered the transition period of socialism, the South continued the national democratic revolution, against the American imperialist aggression to unify the country. Up to now, there have been many works on Vietnamese history in the period of 1954 - 1975, namely historical sets or specific subjects. However, most of them focused on presenting the core content of the history of this period is the struggle to unify the country, or more specifically about the resistance against the American imperialism to save the country of Vietnamese people. Studies on southern Vietnamese society in this period were sketchy and did not contain many topics. Dr. Nguyen Dinh Le's book addresses the social transformation of South Vietnam (1954-1975) in the following aspects: Ethnicity and religion; Class and social labor force; Culture and social education; Social hierarchy.

The tradition of worshipping ancestors and building patriotism is the first duty of the Vietnamese people. That is also the first task of education. So, children in the country, from an early age, need to learn the history of their country, to know the merits of building and defending the country of their previous Ancestors; need to study the geography of the country, to know the shape of home country. In the 1920s, when Vietnamese writing was first introduced, there were not many Vietnamese people familiar with the history and geography of their country, because the number of books published was very rare. In 1924, a group of authors, including Do Dinh Nghiem, Ngo Vi Lien and Pham Van Thu, compiled the book "Geography of the Northern Provinces of the North", specifying the shape of the mountains, the population, the climate, the provinces and the districts. , Village; travel roads; agricultural and agricultural products; industry; trade; along with detailed maps.

In the position of association between Northeast Asia - Southeast Asia and broader than Asia, Vietnam history - culture is a strong flow of East Asian civilization. Historically, Vietnamese ethnic communities have been reclaiming land, expanding territories and developing cultures; sharing, developing and creating indigenous cultural values as well as the common culture of the region. In the history of the nation, the core cultural values of the people of Vietnam, culminating in patriotism, the spirit of national independence, the spirit of community solidarity, have become the cultural foundations, identity, bravery and the strength of the Vietnamese nation. This book contains treatises completed and published in the last 10 years of the author. These are studies and discoveries on a number of issues of regional and world history, of Vietnamese history and culture. Each treatise is an independent study, an experiment in the approach and thinking of a professional problem based on the multidimensional, multidisciplinary and interdisciplinary approach.

Hanoi's ancient streets, rather, Hanoi's Old Quarter, with its attractive scenery, by itself, has been attracting the interest of many people, both domestic and international. Thus, there has long been no shortage of works to be published, as well as many publications issued with perspective depth ranging from culture, literature, painting, photography, and architecture... The book "Hanoi's Old Quarter - Sketches and memories" is a new, unprecedented approach to tell the story of Hanoi's Old Quarter by a mixture of many sketches by artists of all ages and expertise, along with expert opinions and feelings of the people living in Old Quarter. All of them - artists and experts alike, are quite passionate about Hanoi. Going through each page of the book, we will have our own feelings about Hanoi's Old Quarter, but it is certain that each of us will love Hanoi even more.

Art and artisan of Hue Imperial Capital (L'Art à Hué) was a special publication of B.A.V.H (No. 1/1919), first released in 1919. After that, it was reprinted to become an independent work with 398 pages presented vividly and nicely with many drawings and illustrations. The book is considered to be one of the first and only rare scientific studies on visual arts in Hue since 1919. Through the published works of L. Cadière, readers can easily identify his widely interdisciplinary knowledge from history, ethnography, beliefs, languages, archeology ... But what L. Cadière shows in the book is not only the studies that show the depth of knowledge and experience in Hue, but also the passionate affection of a heart sympathetic to the people of this country: "I understand Vietnamese people because I research what is relevant to them. I love Vietnamese people because they are smart, excellent and agile. I also love Vietnamese people because they have been through so much suffering".

Vu Ngoc Phan's 'The Story of Hanoi', published by Bach Viet Publishing House in 1944, is a collection of autographs of the writer from 1939 to 1942 scattered in many Hanoi newspapers. In everyday life with humor and generosity, Vu Ngoc Phan wrote about Hanoi and the people of Hanoi with all the good, the bad, the honest about his home town. In addition to the pages about normal life of Hanoi people, he also criticized the colonial society, the evil things of the lackeys and their families. The book also criticizes the demagogue, false attitude and the true face of the French rulers in Vietnam. Therefore, an important part of the book was removed by the French when censored. In addition to Nguyen Ngoc Tu's "The Story of Hanoi", this book also introduces readers to the writer Le Du examining the history of many architectural and cultural works of Hanoi.

Although the general growth rate of the world economy in 2018 was approximately the same as that in 2017, on a case-by-case basis, many economies experienced a significant decrease or decrease compared to the previous year. Difficult problems also increase with the emergence of new unpredictable risks. It can be said that after an impressive 2017 growth, the world economy began to show signs of differentiated growth and slowed down in 2018. Contrary to the difficult situation of many other economies in the world, Vietnam's economy in 2018 is expected to prosper with an impressive growth rate of 7.08%. This is the highest growth rate in 10 years since the economic crisis in 2007. The book includes two parts: Part I presents an overview of the world economy, countries and regions in 2018 and the first months of 2019 based on the analysis of the following 6 groups of issues: Growth rate; Global trade; Global investment; Global financial market; New dynamics of the economy 4.0; Risks of the global economy. Part II presents an overview and analysis of some of Vietnam's outstanding economic, social and environmental issues in 2018.

"Quốc Triều Hình Luật", also known as the "Luật Hồng Đức" is the name of the "Law of Lê Dynasty", is one of the most important laws of Vietnam during the feudal period. This is the official law of Đại Việt in the early Lê Dynasty (1428-1527) which is still fully preserved. It can be considered as a comprehensive set of laws covering many different legal fields such as: Criminal law, civil law, procedural law, marriage-family law, administrative law... This law is not only highly appreciated compared to the legal achievements of the previous dynasties, but also has many important meanings for the compilation of many other laws of the feudal dynasties of Vietnam after that. The research results of the humanistic and progressive values of the Lê dynasty's law will contribute to the conservation, inheritance and promotion of national cultural heritages and legal traditions in Vietnam today. More importantly, through the study of these laws, lawmakers will draw on but experience with the process of law-making, administrative reform and judicial reform.

The Population and Housing Census is one of three national statistical censuses as stipulated in the Statistics Law. The Census sought to collect basic population and housing information across the entire Socialist Republic of Viet Nam to serve national socio-economic development policies and to monitor the implementation of Sustainable Development Goals per the Government of Viet Nam's commitment. The 2019 Population and Housing Census was implemented in the context of a vigorous fourth technological revolution, and applied information technology in all stages of the Census for the first time. Three types of information collection were used synchronously: an online survey form, a mobile-friendly electronic form and a traditional paper-based form. The implementation of the Census was successful, including the effective application of IT during data collection that helped improve the quality of the data and the transparency of the analysis process, ultimately shortening the time it took to publish the results of Census. The success of the 2019 Census was primarily attributed to the close attention and direction of the Government, Party Committees and authorities at all levels.

The architecture industry in Vietnam is increasingly playing an active role in the urbanization period. Cities require the role of chief architect, but in planning the chief architect is often behind the manager role. The combination of ancient architecture and modern architecture also creates inadequacies between heritage, migration and new life. While high-rise buildings are still being built continuously, the infrastructure is not adapted to them. These things lead to traffic congestion, urban environment pollution; narrowing agricultural land and habitat in villages; The concentration of the population in the city due to underemployment ... The establishment of systems theory about architecture is very necessary. In this book, the author has analyzed two important generalized issues: 1. Urban and the challenges of change; 2. Preserving urban and architectural heritage.

Public sector reform, especially government reform, administrative reform has become a common trend in countries around the world. One of the reform trends that countries strive to implement is the goal of "Small Government, Big Society". In Vietnam, organizational reform of the national administration is always a central task of the reform process. The rational organization of the government apparatus not only contributes to improving the efficiency of national governance, contributes to promoting the development of society but also contributes to the confidence of the people and investors in Vietnam and the Vietnamese government. This book provides theoretical issues on the model of small government construction, the relationship between government and market; analyze the current state of organization and operation of the Vietnamese government; propose solutions to renovate the organization and operation model under the orientation of "small government, big society".

The book consists of two main parts, the first section recording historical events that have been omitted or not recorded in orthodox history; The second part analyzes Vietnam's historical events and compares them with the history of China. In part 2, the author studies two major issues: studying places related to the territory of Vietnam in history such as Giao Chi, Van Lang, Xich Quy, Nam Giao, Au Lac, Nam Viet, Van Xuan, An Nam, Tinh Hai ...; studying the rebellions during the Northern domination period. Both issues are meticulously researched by the author, using very extensive references.

Forty years after the Vietnam War ended, many in the United States still struggle to come to terms with this tumultuous period of U.S. history. The domestic antiwar movement, with cooperation from their Vietnamese counterparts, played a significant role in ending the War, but few have examined its impact until now. In The People Make the Peace, edited by Karín Aguilar-San Juan and Frank Joyce, nine U.S. activists discuss the parts they played in opposing the War at home and their risky travels to Vietnam in the midst of the conflict to engage in people-to-people diplomacy. "The book shatters stereotypes of protesters and shows the activists as thoughtful, courageous and compassionate strategists whose dedication to peaceful diplomacy helped end the war earlier" - Medea Benjamin, CODEPINK. "This collection helps fill in many blanks, adding essential color to the story of this astounding citizens' movement, especially the remarkable saga of the 1970-71 People's Peace Treaty. They inspire reflection that America still sorely needs" - Todd Gitlin, Columbia University.

The overall picture of the world 's political, economic, cultural and social situation is very volatile. The race for science and technology, the revival of Russia, the strong rise of China, India and many emerging countries has led to a relative shift in global power. The world is moving from unipolar to multipolar. Cooperation, peace, and development are still big trends, but there are still many potential factors causing instability such as disputes over borders, territories, islands, ethnic and religious conflicts ...This book was compiled by Professor Vu Van Hien - Vice Chairman of the Central Theoretical Council, former General Director of Voice of Vietnam, focused on analyzing the issues of the era, characteristics of the contemporary world, forecasting the world situation until 2030. Since then, the author has set a sustainable development orientation for the country, resolving the problems of a socialist-oriented market economy and security issues for national defense, internal and external ...

In the context that Vietnam is stepping up international integration, participating in free trade agreements, especially new-generation free trade agreements', such as CPTPP, EVFTA ... has opened up many opportunities for national economic development. Besides, there are also many difficulties and challenges that we must strive to overcome, especially environmental issues that are increasingly concerned and set out in agreements. The implementation of obligations committed in international agreements is a matter of serious compliance by Vietnam. However, the environmental legislation system of Vietnam is still in the process of being completed, not yet synchronized, making it difficult for the implementation of international commitments; awareness of environmental protection of managers, businesses and people is not high; the management capacity of the environmental staff is poor.

Complaints are the basic right of citizens to protect their legitimate rights and interests. Over the past years, the Party and State of Vietnam have always paid attention to the settlement of complaints and denunciations. The system of legal documents regulating this activity has been regularly amended and supplemented to suit the practical situation. This is considered one of the important tasks of state administrative reform and promoting democracy among the people. Along with perfecting the legal system on administrative complaints, state administrative agencies have made considerable efforts in implementation. However, judging objectively, the quality of current administrative complaint handling is still limited. This book has been prepared by the Institute of Strategy and Scientific Inspectorate to provide readers with research results on reviewing and redressing legally effective complaint settlement decisions.

This book was originally the "Secret Document" of the Secret Service under the Governor General of Indochina and kept at the National Archives before 1945, it has now been edited and published for use as a reference of modern Vietnamese history. As it is a secret document, it's not easy for people who study modern Vietnamese history to access the original. It's a "reportage" containing many precious historical documents recorded by the current news and current affairs of the country, conducted by the people and anti-French patriots in the first 20 years of the twentieth century. The historical documents are recorded in the literary form "reportage" vividly and attractively. Although this is also about the uprising, the anti-French colonial movements, about Phan Boi Chau, Phan Chau Trinh, Dong Kinh thuc, Dong du, Thien Dia Hoi, ... but if you carefully read the book, readers will see the specific characteristics of this secret document.

65 years ago, Vietnam fell into a special historical period: temporarily divided into two South - North regions according to the final declaration of the Geneva Agreement (July 21, 1954). This is also the beginning of the continuous 21 years after that, the whole country entered a fierce confrontation with mourning; and the implications for socio-culture left many negative effects later. One of the witnesses of that historical period gathered his notes and published them in the book '21 years of reconnecting the two river's banks'. It has become one of the rare works to mention the subject that most Vietnamese people still look at it with more or less differences. Author Nguyen Long Trao, a veteran revolutionary, who 65 years ago sailed from the Southwest to gather to the North. Since the successful Meiji Restoration, the Vietnamese have had an increasing interest in Japan, which is also reflected in the articles about Japan published in the press in the early twentieth century. By the beginning of the twentieth century, in the face of great fluctuations in the world, especially the renovation of Japan's Meiji Restoration led to a greater need to learn about Japan from Japan. Through the sources of books and newspapers from China and France about Japan, the Vietnamese also began to have more and deeper interest in Japan. This is reflected in a newspaper source in the early twentieth century of Vietnam writing on issues related to Japan quite a lot. With the desire to better understand the trends and contents of the areas of Vietnamese interest in Japan in the early twentieth century through press materials, this book has been published.

Vietnamese press appeared late compared to the press of a number of countries in the world but developed at a fast pace, becoming a modern Revolutionary Press. Nearly one hundred years since the first Vietnamese newspaper appeared in 1865 until 1945, the Vietnamese press has overcome the challenges and that journey has been recognized. The period 1930 - 1945 was the most flourishing period of the press before the Revolution. The press is both a bastion of thought and an effective propaganda task through two wars of resistance against French colonialism and American imperialism. Professor Pham Dinh Lan in teaching history of journalism has chosen an approach to introduce some specific newspapers, typical for progressive, patriotic and revolutionary press trends. The Tale of Kiều is an epic poem in Vietnamese written by Nguyễn Du (1765–1820), and is widely regarded as the most significant work of Vietnamese literature. In 3,254 verses, written in lục bát ("six-eight") meter, the poem recounts the life, trials and tribulations of Thúy Kiều, a beautiful and talented young woman, who has to sacrifice herself to save her family. While modern interpretations vary, some post-colonial writers have interpreted it as a critical, allegorical reflection on the rise of the Nguyễn dynasty. The Narration of "The Tale of Kieu" through 20 southern Vietnamese amateur music was adapted, composed, repositioned lyrics as an adaptation of another type that is Southern music. This book gives readers a version of "The Tale of Kieu" with a style different from the original poem form, or another prose novel. The work of the writer Hoang Than has made efforts to change the original story structure to better fit the melody of the Southern amateur music.

This book provides references and clarifies ideas about intellectuals and their role in the development of Vietnam today. In Vietnam, the decisive factor in the development is the highly qualified human resource, of which the central role is the intellectual team. The reality of 30 years of renovation shows that Vietnamese intellectuals have made great strides: rapid development in number, quality improvement with progressive thinking; directly advise, comment, and criticize major State policies; make significant contributions in all areas of life, economy and society; plays a driving force in the research and application of scientific and technological advances. However, compared to the requirements of the process of industrialization, modernization and international integration, the Vietnamese intellectual team has not really promoted its pioneering role as the nucleus of the development motivation system.

Dr. Nguyen Minh Hoa is one of the leading experts in Urban Studies in Vietnam in general and in Ho Chi Minh City in particular, both from the perspective of theoretical research and practical activities. He has a lot of research on this new field from access to knowledge in countries with harmonious urban development between "conservation and development", where modern cities no matter how constructed are always geared towards the humanities and friendliness of the community. Nguyen Minh Hoa's book contains 78 articles, divided into three chapters: Urban emotions; Urban space; Urban life. One of the most interesting things about this book is that the academic issues are very complex and the scientific theories and concepts are expressed by the author in a simple, easy-to-understand style. A lot of evidence from reality has made the problems of urban areas closer and more vivid.

Currently, there are many scientific studies on ethnic policies in the world and in Vietnam. The above works have made positive contributions to theories, practical summaries, and provided the scientific basis for the formulation and implementation of national policies. However, these studies still show certain limitations, and there are still many "gaps" related to studies on ethnic policies. Therefore, the systematization and evaluation of studies on ethnic policies of Vietnam from 1986 to the present have a very important meaning in the analysis, evaluation and identification of "gaps" on ethnic policies that need to be clarified in the future. In addition to analyzing, evaluating and clarifying the contributions and impacts of the study on the completion of the theory and practice of ethnic policies, The authors have organized the studies according to a set of criteria to become a system, creating favorable conditions for the synthesis, generalization and comprehensive of ethnic policy issues in Vietnam.

In Vietnam so far, the science of happiness has hardly been meticulously studied. We still do not know the concept of happiness and happiness status in real life of people today. What makes them happy or unhappy? Which social group is happier? Which social group is less happy? Why? How to measure happiness? Is the happiness index of Vietnamese people high or low today? What are the cultural characteristics in the concept and enjoyment of happiness of Vietnamese people? The book "The happiness of Vietnamese - Concept, approach & evaluation index" is an attempt to answer the theoretical and practical issues posed in happiness research in Vietnam today. This is a national-level research project, appraised and rated by the National Acceptance Council as "Excellent".

In the first decade of the XX century, the Minh Tân movement intensified in Cochinchina. This is a patriotic movement taking place at the same time, both independently and in connection with the Dong Du and Duy Tan movements in the Central and Northern Vietnam. The Minh Tan movement in Cochinchina first started by calling the Vietnamese to change their economic thinking in the newspaper "Nong Co Man Dam" in 1901, then it developed into a patriotic movement when connected with Dong Du movement. The socio-economic context of the South in the early twentieth century and new ideas imported directly from France into Cochinchina led to the appearance of a campaign to renovate the economic thinking of Vietnamese people in Cochinchina, initiated by Luong Khac Ninh. The goal is to change the concept of Vietnamese people in business, trade, call for capital contribution to set up associations, open production and business companies, compete with foreign powers, enrich the people and the country.

After capturing Saigon and Cochinchina as a colony, the French quickly established and strengthened the administrative system, built infrastructure, promoted commerce. This land is fertile and convenient for economic transport, located between the maritime route linking Singapore and East Asia (Hong Kong, Mainland China and Japan). In accordance with the Ordinance of April 4, 1867, the governor de la Grandière established a City Committee consisting of a city commissioner and 12 councilors. The mission of this City Committee is the same as the later City Council. This book is about the period from 1875 to 1925, that is, after the Giap Tuat treaty (1874). Thereby the Hue court ceded 6 southern provinces to France as a colony until 1925 when the Duy Tan movement was in the final stage with the funeral of Phan Chau Trinh in 1926 in Saigon.

The contact of East-West culture and the process of social and cultural transformation in Vietnam in the early modern period is a big problem in the process of cultural history in particular and national history in general. During that period, Vietnam became a typical colony of French colonialists. The French have policies and intent to assimilate Vietnamese culture in ways such as eliminating Confucian influence, limiting traditional values; creating a coercive Western civilization environment, bringing almost all kinds of Western cultural activities into Vietnam. The Vietnamese culture and society gradually changed, along with the change of cultural models and institutions, new forms of cultural activities also gradually formed. The content of the book presents theoretical and general issues on cultural conditions and changes under the impact of East-West cultural contacts and clashes in Vietnam in early modern times.

This book presents an overview of the material culture, social culture, spiritual culture of Vietnamese culture from the date of independence to the Geneva Agreement (1954); and Vietnamese culture after the Geneva agreement (1954), until the day of reunification (1975). There are many ways of understanding "culture" and "civilization". Here, in many cases, the author has considered "culture" and "civilization" as equivalent concepts.

Vietnamese cultural history is the cultural history of the communities who have grown to the state organization, on the territory of Vietnam today.

Nguyen Duc Xuyen (1759-1824) is the 15th descendant of the Nguyen family. He was a high-ranking mandarin under Emperor Le Trung Hung. In 1822, Emperor Minh Mang ordered the officials who held important positions in the court to write the record of events and incidents, and gather them to make historical documents. Nguyen Duc Xuyen wrote this document in his chronological style. The content includes everything related to Nguyen Duc Xuyen's official duties during 43 years. The majority of this document describes the fighting process of the Nguyen army, from 1780 until capturing Thang Long, with specific battles in the areas of Southern, Phu Yen, Dien Khanh, Quy Nhon, Nam Ngai ... This document is valuable in terms of literature, geography, especially early modern history, in the fields of military, internal affairs, diplomacy and foreign trade of the early Nguyen Dynasty.

The author's book Nguyen The Anh reiterates some issues related to the material life of the Vietnamese people during the Nguyen Dynasty (1802-1945). Written in the 60-70s of the twentieth century, the book is considered a pioneering work approaching socio-economic issues in historical research. Although not covering all aspects of Vietnam's economy and society, this book has laid one of the first bricks for a deeper understanding of Vietnamese history in the nineteenth century, a comprehensive history, not limited to political events. The author has helped readers understand thoroughly about the life of ordinary Vietnamese people in the past including the following aspects: economic structure and production methods, spiritual activities, religious beliefs.

This book was published on the occasion of the 45th anniversary of the official establishment of diplomatic relations between Vietnam and France (April 12, 1973 to April 12, 2018) and the 5th anniversary of the joint declaration of Vietnam - France strategic partnership. Among Western countries that have supported Vietnam against the American imperialism, it must be emphasized that France plays a prominent role. France's support for Vietnam in the struggle to unify the country is profound, specific and comprehensive. From governments, presidents, politicians, political parties, especially the French Communist Party to scientists, intellectuals, religious organizations and social organizations, youth, women ... all spoke and took very practical actions against the US imperialism, supporting Vietnam before and after the end of the war.

The book "The Table of Contents in the Literary Section of Nam Phong Magazine" by Pham Hoang Quan is a very elaborate study. According to the author, this book is designed to assess the overall and comprehensive value of Nam Phong Magazine; as well as "contribute to a more accurate and equitable identification of the authorship of some writers in the early twentieth century". The book is divided into 2 main parts: Table of Author and Table of Classification. In the "Table of Author", Mr. Pham Hoang Quan recorded the full names of the authors, the names of each article, the main content, issue number, the year of issue, and the words count. In the "Classification Index" section he divided the articles into 10 different categories and the time it was published, the number of pages in that magazine.

This is a valuable resource for those who want to study Nam Phong Magazine and historical period in the early twentieth century.

Nguyen Trai (1380 - 1442), pen name of Uc Trai, was a prominent politician and military man who actively participated in the Lam Son Uprising against the invasion of the Ming Dynasty (China) with Dai Viet. He is a national hero and a cultural celebrity of the world. He's also a famous poet in Vietnamese history. His book, written in Chinese characters, provides a brief overview of Vietnam's administrative and natural geography through historical periods, compiled in 1435. The book was translated and edited into Vietnamese based on a version engraved in the Year of the Dragon (1868), under the reign of Emperor Tu Duc. The content of the book consists of 54 articles (not classified into chapters or sections), presenting the geographical location, the shape of mountains and rivers, history, soil, specialties, some traditional crafts and customs of the resident communities. The content of the book is not yet detailed but it has great value in terms of historical geography.

This is a historical novel based on the true story of the talented and tragic life of Nguyen Trai (1380-1442) - a national hero and a cultural celebrity of the world. He was a prominent politician and military official, who actively participated in the Lam Son Uprising against the Ming invasion of Dai Viet. He's also a famous poet in Vietnamese history. Nearly 600 years ago, when the war against foreign countries ended, the internal struggle within the Le Dynasty began. In that crisis, Nguyen Trai became the victim of the most brutal and tragic atrocities in the history of Vietnam, the tragedy of a great man. The whole story was told within 27 days from the birth of Prince Le Tu Thanh (later Le Thanh Tong King) until the day when Nguyen Trai and his wife, scholar Nguyen Thi Lo and their whole family were beheaded. This novel is not only the story of an individual Nguyen Trai, it is also a story of intellectuals in relation to power, to the nation, with the right and ideals that they pursue.

Nghe Tinh is an ancient land of Vietnam, bordering Thanh Hoa to the north and Quang Binh to the south. There are mountains blocking the north and south, the separation also gives Nghe people a unique feature in language, activities, customs, lifestyle ... Many researchers have worked hard to collect treasures of folk proverbs and folklore that are still circulated among the people, saved for the next generation the valuable heritage of the locality as well as the whole nation. This dictionary does not go into specialized words, scientific words, new words, from phonetic transcriptions of foreign languages but only records the dialectal words of the Nghe people, words that older people still use.

Trần Nhân Tông (7 December 1258–16 December 1308), given name Trần Khâm, was the third emperor of the Trần dynasty, reigning over Đại Việt from 1278 to 1293. After ceding the throne to his son Trần Anh Tông, Nhân Tông held the title Retired Emperor from 1294 to his death in 1308. During the second and third Mongol invasions of Đại Việt, the Emperor Nhân Tông and his father the Retired Emperor Thánh Tông were credited as the supreme commanders who led the Trần dynasty to the final victories and since established a long period of peace and prosperity over the country. This book recounts the life of an emperor who, when his power at the top, renounced everything, put on a robes, traveled everywhere to educate and do good deeds.

The belief of worshipping Thien Hau (Mazu) originated from Fujian (China), following in the footsteps of Chinese immigrants, spreading many lands in Southern Vietnam. In the Mekong Delta, there are more than 50 Thien Hau shrines built by Chinese and Vietnamese and organized religious activities. In the minds of the plain people, Thien Hau is both a god and a guardian, but also a blessed being, a merciful mother, received by the Vietnamese through Buddhism and the worship of mother goddesses of Vietnam. Thien Hau's religious activities in the Mekong Delta show both Chinese cultural identity and a living proof for the process of multicultural mixing of the people of this land. This book introduces the process of worship of Thien Hau in China; Propagation and localization in Vietnam; Situation and influence of this belief in the Southwest region.

Lên đồng (Spirit Possession Ritual, votive dance, "to mount the medium", or "going into trance") is a ritual practiced in Vietnamese folk religion and the mother goddess religion Đạo Mẫu, in which followers become spirit mediums for various deities. Lên đồng is in the form of shamanism, through intermediaries to communicate with the spirit, thereby praying to the gods for the help they desire. Feast ceremony with many complex rituals always make people curious and fear. This book helps readers identify and recognize the nature of the phenomenon of Lên đồng, which initially attempts to understand the psychological and physiological aspects of Lên đồng; Homosexuality and homosexuality; Socio-economic aspects of Lên đồng come from gender approach; And finally, the liberation of the aspirations of women in traditional and modern society.

For much of the 20th century, Cải Lương was the pre-eminent form of entertainment in southern Viet Nam with regional versions across the north. Combining music, song, theatre and performance, Cải Lương tells stories of history, legend, comedy, social and personal experiences. Weaving together Vietnamese, Chinese and many other traditions, it is a unique cultural form that Cải Lương Master Nam Chau taught as being both 'beautiful and real'. This short book captures the memories and reminiscences of Cải Lương art offered to British Council oral history researchers, Hugo Frey and Suzanne Joinson, during 10 days' field work in Ho Chi Minh City and Dong Nai province in April 2019. The methodological framework employed facilitated testimonies and an open sharing of memory.

One of the outstanding features of Vietnamese Buddhism is the harmony - harmony with traditional Vietnamese beliefs, the harmony between the Buddhist sects, the harmony with the Tao and the Confucianism. Vietnamese Buddhism is not political but has close ties with the government and plays a major role in managing the country and educating its people. Vietnamese Buddhism is always in the spirit of deep incarnation. The monks, when needed, were able to mount horses and set out on the battlefield to join the people in destroying the enemies to keep the country. A special and quite common phenomenon in Vietnamese history is that many Confucianists still keep the Confucian spirit and also towards Buddhism with respect, especially the most famous Confucianists.

This is an interesting book about a phenomenon that newspapers and magazines in Vietnam rarely talk about, though sometimes mentioned briefly somewhere: Freemasonry. This type of secret society emerged from modern Europe and spread throughout the world, and still seems to exist in this era. In this book, the author does not recount the history of this secret society, but focuses on describing the Freemasons imprints on various cultural and artistic forms. Readers will see the two main symbols of the mason, compass, eke ruler, and a host of other things like the starry sky, the sun, the moon, the globe, the hive, the snake, the rose, and the light, number 3, pyramid. Along with Freemasonry thoughts on the creative spirit for human civilization is expressed in a series of works of various art types, from architecture, sculpture, painting to literature and cinema.

The book is a doctoral study by author Nguyen Van Thoan, a monk who has spent nearly 10 years living at the Phat Tich Pagoda in Vientiane, the capital of Laos. The work has a quite comprehensive system of Buddhist culture, which is clearly shown in the material and spiritual life of the Vietnamese living in Laos; fully reflects the religious and religious life of monks and nuns in Laos, throughout parts of Laos such as Luang Phabang, Vientiane, Savannakhet, Champasak,... In the context of long-term living with Laotians, the Vietnamese community has embraced Lao Theravada Buddhist culture, leading to a transformation to meet the spiritual cultural needs, as well as creating favorable conditions for the new sociocultural integration in Laos. The author stated that Buddhism of Vietnamese people in Laos is a spiritual support for Vietnamese people in their daily lives. Monks are both comforting friends when facing obstacles in life and are the ones who take the lead when they leave this world.

Nowadays, going around the villages in the Central Highlands, we no longer have the opportunity to admire the artistic works of wooden statues as before because they have been modernized by cement and corrugated-iron roof. Most of the photographs in this book were taken from 1986, 1988 and many years after that. From nearly 1,000 photographs taken of wooden statues, grave-houses, grave-living festivals and daily-life events related to this cultural phenomenon; only over 300 photos are selected for publication to store and disseminate the value of this folklore art.

'Although it no longer exists, the ancient kingdom of Champa has left on the strip of coastal plains of Central Vietnam many unique cultural heritages. Of those remaining legacies, the largest, most valuable and richest are the ancient statues. It is no coincidence that currently, in addition to the Danang Museum of Cham Sculpture, the ancient Champa statues are being preserved and displayed in many large museums at home and abroad. This book not only introduces Champa art mainly through newly discovered Cham statues, but also links these new statues to Champa sculpture art that has been identified and accepted. The first and the second parts are the chapters on the statues and sculptures discovered in the North and South Hai Van area. The third part is about the new statues discovered and researched after 1975 in the area of Binh Dinh province - the center of the Champa kingdom for centuries.

The main content of the work does not study ideology or history of ideas but focus on the transformation of three generations of Vietnamese intellectuals from the middle of the XIX century to the middle of the XX century. The author seeks a typical connection for the transformation of Vietnam's ideology in about a century of violent changes of the country in that period. It is the journey of intellectual groups who play the most eloquent and sensitive role of society. The basic content of the work is to identify intellectual groups through historical periods that the author calls "historical generations". The historical context of this period is the conquest of the French colonization, the process of colonization and the confrontation in all aspects of the process of national liberation. Western colonial aggression poses many confrontations and paradoxes in the perception and behavior of intellectuals, not only in terms of national independence but also in the fields of economics, religion, ideology and culture.

They comprise about a third of the Vietnamese lexicon, and may account for as much as 60% of the vocabulary used in formal texts. This vocabulary was originally written with Chinese characters that were used in the Vietnamese writing system, but like all written Vietnamese, is now written with the Latin-based Vietnamese alphabet that was adopted in the early 20th century. However, for many modern Vietnamese people, understanding the meaning of many Sino-Vietnamese words is not easy. This book has been created with the desire to help Vietnamese users have an additional tool for learning and communication.

'Đàng Trong was the region in Central Vietnam, later enlarged by the Vietnamese southward expansion to become Cochinchina (the name was given by the French during colonization in Indochina). Đàng Trong was a kingdom ruled by the Nguyễn lords while they claimed to be loyal subjects of the Lê emperors in Thăng Long (Hanoi). The research results presented in this book show that under the Nguyen Lords not only expanded territory on land, Dai Viet gained more land from Phu Yen to Binh Thuan (1611-1693); but also established sovereignty over islands from Hoang Sa to Truong Sa, along with islands near the mainland such as Cu Lao Cham, Ly Son, Phu Quy, Con Dao and Phu Quoc. The research results also showed that there was a very strict law and trial in Dang Trong, though not mentioned much in other historical documents. The military power was also developed with the powerful navy having made many victories.

"The Veritable Records of the Ming" is a massive chronicle, recording the events of nearly 300 years of 13 Emperors of the Ming Dynasty (1368-1644), including 1329 documents related to Dai Viet and Champa. When studying the relationship between Vietnam and China in the period from 1368 to 1644, many events and characters are recorded quite detailed in the "Veritable Records of the Ming". Meanwhile, the old history books of Vietnam such as "Complete Annals of Dai Viet", "The Imperially Ordered Annotated Text Completely Reflecting the History of Viet" ... are shown in a sketchy manner. With a huge volume, the "Veritable Records of the Ming" is a basic archive that helps a lot in compiling and researching history in China. In the past, Vietnamese historians had known the source of "Veritable Records of the Ming" and had translated some parts to apply to the compilation of the history of Vietnam.

'In Vietnam, exchange and trading activities took place very early. Legend shows that, right from the very beginning of the nation, there were people pursuing a trade. For thousands of years, since the Northern domination period, the Vietnamese business class has been constantly striving to assert its position in social life. Many people have made a good impression on the government and in the masses. The values created by the ideas and actions of many merchants are considered life-long lessons for posterity. However, stemming from the perception of monarchs and feudal dynasties, the status of the Vietnamese business class was not very bright. The book deals with the merchant class for a very long time, thousands of years, from the founding of the country to the time it fell into the hands of the French colonialists.

'Nam Phong magazine is a monthly magazine published in Vietnam from July 1, 1917 to December 1934, consisting of 210 issues for 17 years with the editor Pham Quynh. The achievement of modernizing Vietnamese literature and culture from the first world war to 1945 would be unthinkable without the introduction of Nam Phong Magazine. Advancing the style of "academic literature" and pioneering in this field, Pham Quynh introduced, translated, edited many works, doctrines, academic trends of France and the West, imparted new knowledge to Vietnamese people. Equally important is that he, along with many others, has translated a series of scientific, philosophical and ideological terms that underlie the development of later academic thinking significantly enriched Vietnamese academic vocabulary. This book, written by Professor Nguyen Duc Thuan, is a valuable document to help readers identify and study Vietnamese culture and literature in the early period of formation and development in the early twentieth century.

The market economy can only develop in a healthy and appropriate legal environment. In order to have a healthy and appropriate legal environment for building a market economy, synchronization of private law plays an important role. Vietnamese law is currently in a relatively large and complex situation, causing undesirable impacts on the business legal environment and causing difficulties for economic and social development. In the great disparity of private law, it is necessary to first mention the lack of thorough and detailed consideration when establishing a number of regulations in the private law area that make it difficult for the public law area. The content of this book goes into the theoretical study of private law and synchronization of private law, generalizes the state of private law in Vietnam and offers some key solutions related to private law synchronization.

Hearing impairment is an invisible disability that greatly affects the development of all aspects of the child. Hearing impairment to varying degrees leads to difficulties in children's communication and cognition, especially in receiving education. According to the International Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (CRPD), sign language is the natural language of the deaf. Deaf children have the right to be educated in sign language and need to facilitate sign language learning as well as promote language unity in the deaf community. This book provides the most basic information about deaf children, sign language, and the education of deaf children in a sign language approach. Readers will gain sympathy and understanding for deaf children and their families, as well as the importance of sign language in educating deaf children.

'The Population and Housing Census is one of three national statistical censuses as stipulated in the Statistics Law. The 2019 Population and Housing Census was conducted at 00:00 on 1 April 2019 in accordance with Decision No 772/QĐ-TTg dated 26 June 2018 by the Prime Minister. The Census sought to collect basic population and housing information across the entire Socialist Republic of Viet Nam to serve national socio-economic development policies and to monitor the implementation of Sustainable Development Goals per the Government of Viet Nam's commitment. The 2019 Population and Housing Census was implemented in the context of a vigorous fourth technological revolution, and applied information technology (IT) in all stages of the Census for the first time. Three types of information collection were used synchronously: an online survey form, a mobile-friendly electronic form and a traditional paper-based form.

The East Sea (South China Sea) is the gateway to the Pacific Ocean of Vietnam, an area of special importance in transport, international trade and strategic security. Therefore, this place has become the focus of international relations in Asia - Pacific. Based on the special position related to the East Sea, along with the history of national sovereignty establishment in this sea, as well as the legal grounds prescribed by the 1982 United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea, Vietnam affirmed its full sovereignty, sovereign rights and jurisdiction in accordance with its laws and international conventions on the sea and two Paracels, Spratlys. This book is designed to generalize the process of establishing and enforcing Vietnam's sovereignty over sea and islands with full scientific and legal basis.

The book consists of 18 stories and a selection of photos illustrating the topic of human portraits attached to the sea and islands such as: navy soldiers, their relatives, life on ships ... In the opening of the book, the author group shared on the topic "The eye of the sea" throughout the work: "Going to sea, among the thousands of sacred and loving things; perhaps the eyes in the open sea always evoke feelings of nostalgia. There were tearful eyes off each other at the jetty, quietly looking at each other as the ship left the dock; the bewildered, bewildered eyes of the new soldiers as they looked up at the small island where they were about to set foot; Those eyes were filled with tears, dumbfounded when the soldiers who completed the task left the island, the eyes filled with love. The book clearly shows the enthusiasm of the writer, journalist Lu Mai and engineer, photographer Tran Thanh - young people who come and love Truong Sa with true feelings.

In the context of the current world focusing on inclusive development so that no one is left behind, the social integration of vulnerable groups, including people with disabilities, is increasingly concerned. Social inclusion is closely linked and considered an essential prerequisite for human development. In order to achieve integration, it is necessary to remove the barriers that cause social isolation and strengthen the capacity of vulnerable groups so that they can participate in all aspects of social life. In Vietnam - a country with a relatively high proportion of people with disabilities in the Asia Pacific region - the development of people with disabilities still faces challenges in many areas of life, such as education and health, income, employment. Therefore, people with disabilities face the risk of social isolation.

The Provincial Open Budget Index (POBI) is a national initiative, implemented independently by research, not-for-profit organizations. The POBI 2018 survey was conducted primarily by two member organizations of the BTAP Alliance, the Center for Development and Integration (CDI) and the Vietnam Institute for Economic and Policy Research (VEPR), with the support of Oxfam, within the framework of the project "Promoting publicity, transparency and citizen participation in state budget management". Vietnam is making progress to reform public finance, contributing to improving the efficiency of the Government's budget. Increasing transparency and budgeting is one of the important contents of this reform. POBI is a tool to help provinces and cities to refer and measure the level of publicity and transparency in state budget management and the implementation of the 2015 State Budget Law.
