Branching Out : Joint Forest Management in India
Author : Nandini Sundar, Roger Jeffery and Neil Thin

"This book is a collaborative review of the Joint Forest Management (JFM) programme in India, which is a relatively recent attempt to make forest policy socially responsible. It is a scholarly yet refreshingly analytical study of the origins, regional variations, and shortcomings of various JFM projects.

"The book is a rare combination of extensive field study, social science insights and policy studies. It shows that far from being a simple, unified programme, JFM is a complex outcome of debates, policies and practices, all recent in ecological and institutional terms, and all constantly evolving.

"The authors demonstrate how the livelihood objectives of poor people living in and around forests are still far from being met. Despite the officially explicit objective of JFM—afforestation of degraded lands—this book reveals that in practice, governments have had other implicit agenda. In the process of implementing 'participatory' forestry, communities and their needs are being reconfigured.

"The volume combines detailed ethnographic work at the village level with a survey of NGOs and forest departments at the state and national levels. With the fieldwork spread over sixteen villages in Gujarat, Madhya Pradesh, Orissa and Andhra Pradesh,

GATT : A Developing Country Perspective
Author : Arijay Chaudhry

"The book is divided into two parts. The first exclusively covers the various agreements as negotiated under the Uruguay round of talks and highlights developing country concerns with regard to these. The second part is largely academic and delves deep into the dispute resolution system under the WTO mainly because the dispute resolution system is in itself a very important element towards making a multilateral trade system successful. The philosophies behind the functioning of the system and the provisions of nullification and impairment in particular have been taken up at length.

The Partial Memoirs of V.K.R.V. Rao
edited by S.L. Rao

"V.K.R.V. Rao remains one of the foremost Indian social scientists. An outstanding economist and well-known institution builder, he was at the centre of policy-making in the country. He paved the way for research and training in economics and the social sciences. He is the founder of the Delhi School of Economics and The Institute of Economic Growth in Delhi, and the Institute for Social and Economic Change, Bangalore. He also led the trend of economists embarking on a career in politics and the government.

"This book is a collection of the incomplete memoirs of the late V.K.R.V. Rao. It includes accounts of his education, his tenure as Vice-Chancellor of Delhi University, and his ministerial days. The book provides little-known information about V.K.R.V. Rao's personal life as well as his years as a student of Lord Keynes in Cambridge.

"Rao lived through a critical time in independent India's history when her route to development was charted. He worked in close association with the key players in India's politico-economic policy-making such as Pandit Nehru, P.C. Mahalanobis, and much later, Indira Gandhi.

"Unfortunately, V.K.R.V. Rao passed away before he could finish writing his memoirs, and even give these chapters a second glance. This volume provides an incomplete picture of his life, nevertheless giving rare insight into the personality of an outstanding economist who left his mark in many fields and became an institution in his lifetime.

"The book includes writings by distinguished academics such as P.N. Dhar, C.H. Hanumantha Rao, G. Thimmaiah, Uma Datta Roy Choudhury, and Ashish Bose, highlighting Rao's contributions to various fields of applied economic research.

Microplanning : A Guide to Participatory Natural Resource Management Author : J.P. Yadav

"Recent years have witnessed a paradigm shift in the developmental planning process. The most significant change is seen in the governmental emphasis on area-based basic approach for the management of natural resources. There is increasing acceptance of participatory resource management by involving local communities, officials, non-governmental organisations and other stakeholders. As such an approach requires site-specific microplans, this book shows how to prepare these. It explains the concept and gives a step-by-step account of the various processes involved in microplanning in simple language and easy style, and presents advanced scientific techniques for best use of resources by planners who are not specialists in the subject. The methods have been explained using practical situations. Those working on joint forest management, rural development, watershed management and academics will find this book particularly, useful

Singapore in the New Millennium
Challenges facing the City-State
Editor : Derek Da Cunha

Among nation-states, Singapore ranks as possibly the greatest success story of the 20th Century. It is a story Of how a small city-state in the politically volatile region of Southeast Asia transformed itself, within a relatively Short period of time, from being an economic backwater to an economic dynamo not just within Southeast Asia but the wider Asia-Pacific Region. What is less well know, however, is that beneath the veneer of success there are undercurrents within the economic, social and body politic of the city-state which pose significant challenges for it in the new millennium.

Tourism, Anthropology and China
Author : Tan Chee-Beng, S.C.H. Cheung & Yang Hui

These conference proceedings bring together sixteen ethnographic case studies on tourism in China and elsewhere by Chinese and non-Chinese scholars. While Yunnan is a particular focus, tourism in Guizhou, Hong Kong, and Macau are also studied. A number of papers deal with ethnic tourism and conservation, and major anthropological perspectives on the study of tourism are also presented. An important aspect of China's economic development over the past two decades, tourism has had a major impact on local economies and socio-cultural development, topics insightfully pursued here. The volume makes a major contribution to the study of ethnic tourism, an activity closely intertwined with representing ethnic minorities, their interaction with the state, as well as their management of marginality, modernity, and globalization.

Modern Malaysia in the Global Economy
Political and Social Change into the 21st century

Edited by : Colin Barlow

This substantial new book examines key economic, political and social aspects of Malaysia at the turn of the new century. It covers the years of rapid growth and dramatic structural change leading up to the 1997 financial crisis, and the subsequent adjustments which enabled the economy to resume its vigorous advance. The authors critically address affirmative action policies aiming to help

Malays enter the modern economy and make income distribution more equitable while reducing poverty. They look at case studies of persisting poverty amidst economic progress, and also scrutinize the development of East Malaysia with its special problems away from the centre of power in Kuala Lumpur.

Beyond the Asian Crisis : Pathways to sustainable Growth
Edited By: Anis Chowdhury , Iyanatul Islam

As Southeast and Northeast Asia recover from the Asian crisis and return to a state of growth, the authors of this book assess the lessons to be learned from the crisis to achieve sustainable development in the future. While the importance of each factor contributing to the crisis varies from country to country, their collective experience has created unprecedented turmoil in current thinking on development policy.

The authors argue that the major schools of thought need paradigm changes in the wake of the crisis. Those who believe that a 'strong state' or system of semi-democracy is essential for economic growth have been disproved by the sudden collapse of these economies. These countries must now adapt to the fact that society must be open to ideas and democratize its polity to achieve innovation-driven sustainable development. Those who used the success of East Asian economies as a vindication of the neoclassical orthodoxy, referred to as the 'Washington consensus' must now see the follies of progressive withdrawal of the government from the economic sphere and of unfettered flows of short-term capital

The Foreign Economic Policies of Singapore, South Korea and Taiwan
Edited By : Christopher M.Dent

Singapore, South Korea and Taiwan , East Asia's premier newly industrialised economies have experienced a profound development transformation over recent decades. Christopher Dent makes a comparative study of their foreign economic policies, highlighting how the NIE-3 have engaged with the international economic system in an increasingly dynamic way. The book develops a new macro-framework of foreign economic policy analysis that provides the structure for this study. The author argues that the 'development context' of the NIE-3's foreign economic policies is grounded in their common development statism and semi-peripheralisation. The book further contends that it is the pursuit of economic security that primarily motivates their respective foreign economic policies.

Economic Liberalization in India : Japanese & Indian Perspectives

Edited by : K.V. Kesavan

The book is the outcome of a joint Indo-Japanese seminar held in New Delhi under the auspices of the Indian Council of Social Science Research (ICSSR) in January, 1999. Contributors to this volume include distinguished scholars from Japan and India. They discuss and evaluate the ongoing economic liberalization programme in India in a comparative perspective. The compelling reasons for adopting the liberalization programme and its implementation have been analysed objectively. In particular, Japanese experiences in areas like power, agriculture, irrigation and employment adjustment carry useful lessons for India which is now undergoing a major economic and social transformation in the wake of the economic liberalization programme.

Economy & Labour

Author : L. Mishra

How does globalisation radically alter the nature of work place, distribution of work at various levels in terms of identification of core versus peripheral activities leading to contractualisation and casualisation and adding to the size of the unorganized/informal sector?

How do the trade unions perceive and respond to the problem of displacement caused on account of retrenchment of workers due to rationalization and the problem associated with their rehabilitation through training, retraining, career counseling and redeploy-ment? What type of technology do we borrow and how to promote and encourage growth of indigenous technology which will be affordable, easily adaptable and replicable?

How do we bring about a radical and qualitative change in the attitude, approach and perception of social partners?

How do we rationalize and remove so many laws from the statute book and introduce a set of new laws which are more relevant to the changed conditions, and which help in harmonising economic growth with social justice?

How do we introduce the right ethos and culture of commitment to work as a matter of price and patriotism?

Economy & Labour addresses these and other relevant issues relating to labour market in the wake of economic reforms.
