Some 10,000 kinds of Chinese dishes have been created so far but that is not the sole achievements of professional chefs. Recipe contributions have also come from kings, emperors, officials, scholars and ordinary citizens. And the creative process varies from continued improvement by generations of cooks to an instant clever idea. Still there have been cases where a good recipe came up by pure chance.

The nearly eighty entries in this book not only list the ingredients and ways of preparation of the dishes, but also tell stories associated with them, to give people an opportunity of being acquainted with some fantastic tales while trying superb flavors.

When it comes to food, the Chinese have a common saying, "The masses regard food as their haven, "which means that food is people's primal want. It should clearly justify the importance that "eating" holds in Chinese people's lives. Eating is not just meant to fill the stomach; having food at one's disposal, being able to consume a good amount of food, and knowing what and how to eat are all viewed as a good "fortune". Those who promote food culture often use the words of Chinese philosopher Confucius, "diet and love-making, all primal needs of every human being," finding an aspiring and positive thought basis for such an epicurean lifestyle. Today, in this world where even the farthest corners can seem as close as one's eye back yard, Chinese food can be enjoyed in each and every metropolitan throughout the world.

Food from Northern Laos: The Boat Landing Cookbook / Dorothy Culloty

Awamutu, New Zealand: Galangal Press, 2010

200p. ; 25cm.

ISBN-13: 9780473172367

$ 45.00

The little known cultures and cuisine of northern Laos are reflected in the recipes of its local ethnic groups and Luang Namtha Province's premiere ecotourism lodge. Eighty-eight dishes from Lao, Kmhmu', Tai Dam, Tai Yuan, Tai Lue and Akha are presented in clear, simple recipes. The stunning photography of food preparation in village homes and at The Boat Landing Guest House and Restaurant ties the dishes to their indigenous setting.
