This novel has beamed light on pre-independence Nigeria, with an uncommon eye on details. It is revealing in its description of the ways of life and culture of the people, as wars mingled with love, tearing families apart. It depicts the struggles and pain of the Nigerian woman; while acknowledging her legendary strength and courage.

The Dawn of Full Moon / Osita C. Ezenwanebe
Ibadan, Nigeria: Kraft Books Limited, 2009
81p. ; 19cm.
ISBN-13: 9789784909815
$ 15.00

The Dawn of Full Moon is a courageous drama celebrating womanhood. Daalu is abused sexually, maltreated and manipulated by Ikedi. Though the inhumanity of men to the female gender is highlighted in this play, the overriding theme of resilience and love with a happy ending elevates this work beyond the well-travelled road of feminism and women liberation.

Ibadan, Nigeria: Kraft Books Limited, 2011
xii. 286p. ; 22cm.
ISBN-13: 9789788135708
$ 75.00

JP Clark: A Voyage is the definitive biography of Clark by Femi Osofisan, himself one of Nigeria's most accomplished playwrights. It chronicles the life and career of the man John Pepper Clark-Bekederemo, from his remarkable childhood to his emergence in the 60s among the best and brightest of Nigerian literature. For the first time, JP breaks his silence about the controversial position he took during Nigeria's Civil War and discusses his relationship with Soyinka and Achebe.

The Mighty Wave / He Jin
Selangor: Strategic Information and Research Development Centre, 2011
386p.
ISBN-13: 9789675832178
$ 19.00

A major novel about the anti-colonial mass movement in Singapore in the 1950s which started with the Chinese middle school students assembling on 13 May 1954 at the pavements of Penang Road to petition the Governor for their exemption from national service. This mass gathering was forcibly broken up by the riot police. It ends with the 1959 general election, in which the political party they supported triumphed. The protagonists of the novel look forward to contributing to the new phase in Singapore's political development. That was not to be. Set in the more rustic Singapore in the 1950s some of the scenes depicted are recognizable by the older generation, but have disappeared from the modern landscape. They cover locations like Tiong Bahru, Pasir Panjang, Siglap, and the Beach Road vicinity. The Mighty Wave is a Singapore novel which deserves a place in the country's literary history.

Old Singapore was an electric trade emporium, where an ethnically and culturally diverse populace coalesced, and sometimes clashed, under the aegis of the British Empire. It was a fascinating world filled with traders of all nations, roving bands of privates, murderers running amuck and even the occasional flesh-hungry tiger.

This publication presents the first critical edition of a Crimean Karaim anthology of Karaim and Turkish literature called Mejuma, which is an adaptation of the Ottoman Turkish Word Mecmua. It was copied by Eliyahu ben Yosef Qilci in Bahcesaray between 1903-1904 and in 1910. The language of the most part of this manuscript is Crimean Turkish with a substantial admixture of Crimean Tatar and Karaim Grammar and vocabulary. In this anthology the reader may explore a rather little known Turkic speaking minority in the Crimea, which existed on the crossroads of various cultures
