Buddhist Daily Ritual : The Nitya Puja in Kathmandu Valley Shrines / Gregory Sharkey
Bangkok : Orchid Press, 2001
xvi, 360 p.; ill, 22cm.

[A Comprehensive look at devotional rituals in Newar Buddhist viharas, this book is a major contribution to Newar Studies and to the broader ethnography of Nepal and the Himalayan region.

In addition to documenting a very central, but little-known religious practice of the Newars, this study assesses the influence of Vajrayana ideology and the congruity of Newar daily rituals with early Buddhist and Theravada practice.

It also provides the most complete scholarly study to date of Buddhist Sanskrit hymns and their use.

In addition to colour plates of ritual implements and actions, the text is thoroughly illustrated with drawings by Mukti Thapa, one of Nepal's most renowned living painters.]

Dangerous Wives and Sacred Sisters : Social and Symbolic Roles of High-Caste Women in Nepal / Lynn Bennett

[This comprehensive study explores the social construction of gender among high-caste (Brahman-Chetri) Hindus in rural Nepal. The unit of study is the family as it operates within kinship networks. Through a detailed examination of the social, mythic and ritual structures which shape the interaction between men and women, the study reveals the symbolic roots of women's power and the complex social institutions, norms and beliefs which seek to contain that power and direct it to the perpetuation of the patrilineal group. The study shows how individual women live and strategize within the ambiguities of their position in the gender system. While the most "Visible" aspects of this system focus on women's ritual impurity.

The richness of Dangerous Wives Sacred Sisters lies in the range of methodologies used and the intimacy the author established during her ten year contact with the families and with the community in which she lived as participant observer. Genealogies, surveys of marriage patterns, rituals, and religious beliefs are also utilized to elucidate both the broader and finer details of the status and concerns of women. Especially valuable are the in-depth life history interviews conducted with a degree of privacy rare in the village context.]

[The result of several years research during his stay in Nepal as a German Volunteer assigned to the Building Department (now housing and Physical Department) of HMG, Nepal. This book by Mr.Wolfgang Korn is a study of the group of buildings in the Kathmandu Valley best described as " traditional nepalese style". While omitting for practical reasons stupas/ chaityas and temples of the shikara style, this book outlines the religious as well as public and private buildings alongwith their measurements and linedrawn sketches. The text gives a good and informative account of the architecture collected from diverse sources as well as from keen observation of monuments while drawing.]

[Many have wondered what the businessmen of Nepal were doing during emergency and amidst insurgency when almost 40 percent of the geographical territories are disturbed. The cities are usually closed down before dusk. The political neglect of the economy is always embedded by cost. The prolonged political gridlock has led the economy vis-à-vis nowhere. The lingering policy paralysis has crippled investment to a large extent. As a result, the country's finance have gone away and the finance budgetary estimates are way off target. The country's financial ruin is climbing since the country is clouded by insurgency and political uncertainty. It seems the economy of the country is too sick to recover.

Corporate Nepal today is sandwiched from the various problems. From sentiments to investments to national income, a lot is at stake. For Business, the only hope is that the uncertainty is a precursor to lasting stability. The current political chaos has become expensive in terms of business sentiment, policy decisions and lost opportunities to a large extent. In a country where 'big people' and 'small People' exist, making business success under democratic norms has become biggest challenge in this new millennium.]

[For more than five decades, Rishikesh Shaha has been one of Nepal's leading political and cultural figures. He has served his country in many different capacities – as Minister of Foreign Affairs, as Minister of Finance, Planning and Economic Affairs and as Nepal's First delegate to the United Nations. He has also been a tireless advocate for human rights in his native country, where he had been imprisoned several times for what the Nepalese government claimed was treason, but for what Mr. Shaha saw as the expression of his civil rights of freedom of speech and assembly.]

[This book describes in detail the history of urbanization of Pokhara town, which is the fastest growing and one of the best – known towns in Nepal. The extraordinary history of growth and change over the last four decades is covered in the book. The process of urbanization and the consequent transformations in socio – economic, political, cultural and environmental aspects of the town are described. The folk and written literature, tourism and the interaction of the town with its hinterlands are other issues covered in the book. It is hoped that this study of transformations of Pokhara should shed light on the process of urbanization in Nepal.]

[The tragic death of King Birendra, Queen Aishwarya and Members of the Royal Family in the massacre that took place in the Narayanhiti Royal Palace in Kathmandu Nepal, on June 1, 2001, has left the kingdom and its people devastated. For Nepal, the year 2001 was blood, terror and tears. The enormity of the tragic June 1 incident left a deep scar on the Kingdom's psyche.

This book, neither seeks to prove anything on the sad tragedy, nor does it endeavours to comment on issues related to the tragic incident. The book is primarily dedicated to the life and times of late King Birendra, the symbol of national unity. It merely attempts to recollect the moods and moments of the King's sudden death that left the kingdom facing. During his almost three decades of golden and memorable reign, King Birendra made the institution of Monarchy not only acceptable but respectable.]

[In a democratic country the state of emergency also must be confined to the constitutional framework. The state of emergency is becoming extremely painful to the general people and the entire nation. If the situation continues, the Nepalese people, known for living in peace, are feared to grow immune to the killings and violence. The Maoists, a political revolutionary group in the initial phase, are now losing their political character as viewed by the Nepalese People.

It is imperative to create pressure among political parties, in line with public opinion through consensus among all sectors for resuming peace talk between government and the Maoists. But, assurance of justice, and protection and promotion of human rights of the people are the guiding factors for sustaining the peace process. Until and unless justice is guaranteed the people will not be self-confident. Without confidence of the people peace cannot be attained.]

[This is a preliminary essay on the literature written in the older dialects of the Newari language available mostly in the manuscripts dated between ca.A.D. 1360 – 1900. Being a programmatic rather than a final statement on the nature of the literature, part of its purpose is to erect a framework of firm chronology without which no history can be attempted.

The essay is divided into two parts : the first part, consisting of the first six chapters, presents a brief survey of the literate culture and traditions of the Newars, of which Newari literature is only a tangible evidence. The second part deals with the literature proper.]

[Nepali Political Parties have recently stepped into a new phase of party building. With the restoration of democracy in 1990, Political parties, the Nepali Congress (NC) and the Communist Party of Nepal, Unified Marxist – Leninist (CPN-UML) in particular, have undergone a number of distinct transformations : from illegal organizations to legitimate contenders for political power; from movement or underground organizations to open competitive parties; from a small group of people sharing common interests to heterogeneous organizations consisting of people of diverse interests; and, from ideology oriented organizations to power seeking parties. The whole gamut of party building efforts made by the NC and the CPN – UML in the post – 1990 period can be assessed on the basis of four variables expansion, system, harmony and dynamism – as indicators of the party building process in Nepal.]

[This book has been planned as an in-depth study of Rara village with enough information. The Lucid Style of the book makes its readers enthusiast the most important advantage is that it diligently goes to political autonomy and economic dependence in former Nepalese community. It also traces three castes – sah, Thakuris, Chetris and Doms who inhabited in Rara village. Also the book provides an analysis of the economic relationship and the kinship systems of Thakuris and Chetris. So it has content with a complete readable, self – content course for individual study and requires no previous knowledge. This book is profusely illustrated by the help of diagrams and tables that enhance it quite typical and user – friendly. Of course, this book will be found both informative and enjoyable to students of all subjects as well as people from all walks of life.]

[The Confluence of Religions, a Scientific Perspective is a new work of the 21st Century desiring to find the common scientific and spiritual basis of all the religions developed so far. In the theory proposed hereby, the whole human mind and body is said to be evolved by the earth's electromagnetic force and the universal gravitational force of the sun, earth and the moon. These natural forces may be called as the 'Word' creating power of God. Balancing of all these forces in the mind is the complete balance of the mind resulting in Samadhi, paradise or the Kingdom of Heaven. All the scriptural claims of the different Perennial Religions are scientifically confirmed and a new basis for their coordination has been discovered.]

[State – Women Relations in Nepal have changed at three major historical junctures. A high degree of mobility is a sine qua non for participation in politics, whether the socio-cultural milieu of the country allows Nepali women to be mobile is thus a vital issue of concern.

Are women in a position to seize the opportunities granted by the liberal political atmosphere to interact with the state as citizens?

Women-specific civil organizations provide an alternative political space where collective action by women allows negotiations with the state.

The experiences of Scandinavian countries ... Suggest that the most important strategy for women's empowerment in intervention in political parties.

Re-Imagining the state from the feminist perspective is to reorient an activist and intervenist state, making it as women friendly as possible through strategic interventions.]
