The world is no doubt full of self-improvement books. What sets Toshio Egawa's book apart is that its focus is more about being at The Top than about getting there. Of course, the traits that get you there and the traits that keep you there overlap in many cases. One could go further to say that it is not always clear whether one is on the way to the top, is at the top or is on the way down from the top.

But there are ethical goals and self-reflections; social attitudes and pragmatic shrewdness, as well as a sense of time passing, which should be cultivated in any case if one is to live a full and meaningful life. The Top may not be a place that we can easily locate. As Egawa-san puts it:

"Being alive, we should, at least until we have aged too much, recompense and respect our situation by undertaking responsible work as human beings. Before we know it, we would have reached a certain age beyond which daily quietude, good health and physical safety become paramount. All the rest power, position, business results, assets, lust, et cetera are but brief moments, simply passing scenery."

Inaugural Lecture of the Darul Ehsan Public Lecture series by Professor Dr. Mohd Faiz bin Abdullah (Dean of Selangor Business School, UNISEL) delivered on 19 September 2017

In this short monograph, the author proposes to shed light on the transformation of Selangor into a regional smart state. He defines the term "Smart State" and examines the theoretical foundations of paradigm change touching on the Kuhn-Popper debate concerning falsifiability. The author contends that this discourse has been dominated by Western scholarship viewed from secular-oriented lenses. He presents his alternative perspective from the prism of Islam and revealed knowledge as articulated in his first two books, The Province of Shariah Determined – Fundamental Rethink of the Shariah and Wars of Jurisprudence – Clash between Contractual Justice and Freedom of Contract. The author discusses questions on managing strategic change, leadership and strategic management doctrines and principles. Having set the theoretical discourse, he presents some key case studies to support the contention that propelling change for the state of Selangor is neither rhetoric nor polemics but supported by facts, figures and tangible results. The author makes the case for continued support for transformational change made even more pressing by the advent of the Fourth Industrial Revolution. Good governance, accountability and transparency and social justice are posited as critical success factors for the transformation. He proposes some strategic formulations in respect of the key steps to further drive the change process and propel the transformation trajectory.

Over the years, there has been an increase in the auctioning activities in Malaysia. However, the auctioneer's profession in Malaysia is not given the recognition as a result, the existence of the auctioneering profession in Malaysia is hardly known to many as compared with other established professions. Therefore, the purpose of this book is to give an awareness to the readers on current auctioneering practices in disposing real estate in Malaysia. The interesting about this book provides some interesting background of this profession that includes the history of Auction in Malaysia. Beside, this book provides the existing structure and the legislative framework of the auction practice in Malaysia that was valuable sources of information to the readers. In addition, it's also provided some information on getting an auctioneer's licence in Malaysia as well as the general procedure for auction in High court and land Office. This book concludes with valuable insights for improving the current auctioneer's profession in Malaysia. The contents of this book are based on authors' previous research and experiences in this area.

This book identifies how the major and some minor bond markets reacted to interest rate increases and decreases over the recent few years. As every investor knows excessive borrowings relative to the ability to service loans constitute sovereign debt crisis, and it is not limited only to developing countries as shown by the fall in bond values of profligate borrowers such as the Greece. This book is on the pricing of sovereign debt in 17 bond markets across the developed world, ones that have received most of the investors' money as investments.

"La Nouvelle-Calédonie s'apprête à prendre un virage institutionnel et politique dans un monde qui a radicalement changé depuis les premières luttes pour la décolonisation. Vingt-huit ans après les accords de Matignon-Oudinot, alors que se profile une nouvelle date clé pour son avenir institutionnel et politique avec la sortie programmée de l'accord de Nouméa, où en est la Nouvelle-Calédonie ? Son modèle économique a-t-il fondamentalement changé ? Sa trajectoire de développement est-elle soutenable ? Alors que le pays est engagé dans un processus de décolonisation négocié, quels sont ses atouts et ses options stratégiques pour affronter la mondialisation et ses nouvelles formes ? Le pays est en effet de plus en plus intégré à des marchés mondiaux libéralisés et dérégulés ; l'urbanisation se confirme mais elle prend des formes et a des impacts qui déjouent certains pronostics et tendances observées ailleurs ; vingt-cinq années de croissance soutenue ont dopé le marché intérieur ; en lien avec la croissance des mobilités, la place du non-marchand et de la coutume est restée essentielle à son développement humain ; les transferts de compétences de l'État français vers le territoire opérés au cours des vingt dernières années ont transformé les lieux et les acteurs de la décision politique ; l'industrialisation par la métallurgie a changé la donne quant à la répartition de la rente du nickel ; la bipolarisation politique a fait place à davantage de pluralisme... pour ne citer que certaines des évolutions les plus emblématiques. A la veille de la consultation sur le transfert des dernières compétences, quels sont les futurs possibles pour l'économie très politique de la Nouvelle-Calédonie ? Sur quels acquis institutionnels et économiques de la trajectoire récente s'appuyer ? Quels relais de croissance activer et, au-delà et surtout, quel modèle de développement et quel "contrat social" renégocier ?"

"L'intégration régionale des territoires français du Pacifique (les TFP, qui comprennent la Polynésie française, la Nouvelle-Calédonie, Wallis-et-Futuna) est-elle souhaitable ? En 1995, il y a donc vingt ans aujourd'hui, Jean Freyss se livrait à une analyse novatrice de l'économie calédonienne en soulignant un paradoxe majeur : riche de son nickel, potentiellement la plus autonome de l'outremer, elle reste très largement dépendante des transferts de la métropole (Économie assistée et changement social en Nouvelle-Calédonie, PUF, 1995). Mais qu'en est-il aujourd'hui alors que la Nouvelle-Calédonie est très engagée dans le processus d'émancipation voulu par l'accord de Nouméa, signé le 5 mai 1998, et que la Polynésie française a également gagné en autonomie ? L'ouvrage publié aujourd'hui par les Presses universitaires de Nouvelle-Calédonie présente des recherches en économie menées au sein du laboratoire LARJE de l'Université de la Nouvelle-Calédonie. Financées par le Fonds de coopération économique, sociale et culturelle pour le Pacifique du ministère des affaires étrangères, ces recherches montrent combien le paradoxe mis en avant par Jean Freyss conserve toute son actualité et ont pour ambition de nourrir la réflexion autour de la problématique de l'intégration régionale. En effet, ces territoires (les TFP) ont en commun leur éloignement de la métropole et le bénéfice de transferts financiers issus de cette dernière. Ils demeurent donc privilégiés au sein du Pacifique en termes de développement au point que leurs économies sont souvent considérées comme artificielles. Leurs situations sont proches en ce qui concerne la cherté de la vie et les surcoûts, dont la mécanique est précisément ici décrite, de même que les phénomènes de marges. Néanmoins, ils ne sont pas égaux au vu de leurs ressources propres et de leur autonomie institutionnelle, surtout compte tenu du destin unique d'émancipation pouvant déboucher sur l'indépendance que poursuit la Nouvelle-Calédonie depuis l'accord de Nouméa. Tout ceci forme le contexte d'appréciation de l'enjeu de l'intégration régionale de ces trois territoires et c'est à travers lui que l'ouvrage apprécie les coûts et les avantages d'un tel processus. Dans ce cadre, les auteurs évaluent le rôle et l'impact des accords de libre-échange régional PICTA et PACER, qui questionnent les fondements économiques mêmes des territoires français. Ils reviennent sur les théories standards du commerce international, peu applicables aux particularités des TFP, au pouvoir d'achat si dépendant de perfusions métropolitaines et d'une parité FCFP / euro artificielle sans lien avec leur poids économique. Quelle conséquence aurait un libre-échange régional sur le chômage, en Nouvelle-Calédonie notamment ? Et comment serait-il possible d'être plus compétitif que les grands voisins du Pacifique, l'Australie et la Nouvelle-Zélande ? Au final, existe-t-il pour les TFP des possibilités d'intégration économique régionale qui soient réellement bénéfiques ? Sous quelle forme ? A quelles conditions ?"

Indonesie contemporaine / Remy Madinier

Quatrième état le plus peuplé de la planète, premier pays du monde musulman, seule véritable démocratie d'Asie du Sud-Est, l'Indonésie demeure un géant méconnu. Au carrefour des influences indienne et chinoise, les frontières de ce vaste archipel furent dessinées au gré des heurts entre impérialismes européens (Espagne, Portugal, Angleterre et surtout Pays-Bas). L'histoire de l'Indonésie depuis son indépendance est d'abord celles des contradictions nées des choix à la fois originaux et courageux de ses pères fondateurs : une république jacobine pour gouverner un territoire immense et éclaté, un idiome véhiculaire peu parlé pour langue nationale, un état religieux mais non islamique. Le présent ouvrage, fruit de la collaboration entre vingt-sept spécialistes reconnus (dix-huit français et neuf indonésiens) est une synthèse à la fois rigoureuse et accessible des dernières recherches en sciences sociales sur l'Indonésie. Géographes, anthropologues, historiens, économistes, politistes, spécialistes de littérature proposent ici un large panorama permettant de comprendre les enjeux démographiques, spatiaux, religieux et culturels de l'émergence d'une puissance régionale mais aussi les défis auxquels est confrontée cette jeune nation depuis sa remarquable transition démocratique en 1998.

This second edition of Thailand's Sustainable Development Sourcebook was created to showcase, monitor and sincerely assess Thailand's continued efforts and progress on many vital economic, social and environmental issues facing the world today. An impressive range of facts, information, infographics and articles have all been updated from the original edition of the book (first released in 2015). New chapters have been written on critical topics such as climate change and income inequality. Overall, the book offers a powerful kaleidoscopic view of the ongoing plans, projects and leadership in Thailand, which is shaping a more balanced and inclusive development path for the country.

Dreams of Prosperity offers a critical composite reflection on Southeast Asia as a progressively integrated and globalized space of production, exchange, and circulation within and beyond national boundaries. Through a broad array of contexts united by the theme of integration, the essays describe the successful or unsuccessful entry of specific individuals or groups into wider markets and networks in their quest for prosperity—in Thailand, by Lua peasant farmers, slum families, the last century's teak laborers, and ethnic tour hosts; in Indonesia, by the urban poor and communities resisting environmental destruction; and in Vietnam, by human trafficking returnees. The authors examine how these groups are socially and symbolically defined and redefined in the process of integration, and consider the imaginaries of future that enable both active participation and unmitigated manipulation. Two key topics are the cognitive struggle that peasants and laborers face with their material environment and the process of sense-making that characterizes many destitute people in urban contexts.

This fresh and unusual collection lays the ground for a comparative grassroots approach to inequality and integration in Southeast Asia. It is a uniquely useful resource for area studies and social science students, and also provides insight for those engaged in humanitarian and political action.

Book Details:

This report measures and compares SADC countries capacity and ability to manage the mining sector. Today's governments are challenged with creating new approaches to governance that enable them to better exploit the developmental potential provided by mineral resources. Establishing regulatory frameworks and state capacity to ensure that activities of mining companies are compatible with efforts to promote inclusive and sustainable development are central to this challenge.

South African Banks are key funders of a number of mining companies operating in the SADC region. Questions abound on the nature of these deals and the lack of transparency that surrounds them. There are concerns about whether banks do due diligence before they fund any mining activities to guard against corruption, social, environmental and human rights abuses that are linked to mining. This report interrogates the funding commitment of South African banks in mining in SADC and considers whether they can do things differently.

The 2012 SADC Gender Protocol Barometer is the fourth annual tracking report of regional performance against the 28 targets of the Southern African Development Community (SADC) Protocol on Gender and Development set for 2015. The Barometer is an independent civil society initiative that draws on country reports by researchers and experts from each SADC country. Researchers updated country information based primarily on secondary research data and interviews with relevant stakeholders. The regional barometer goes hand in hand with the accompanying 2012 country Barometers for all 15 SADC countries available online or CD Rom. This year's barometer has two key new features. The first is Chapter 11 on Gender, Climate Change and Sustainable Development. While SADC is yet to adopt an Addendum or additional articles to the SADC Protocol on Gender and Development it is important to begin monitoring progress using the draft document that civil society is using to canvass SADC and Member States.

The Political Economy of Change in Tanzania: Contestations over Identity, the Constitution and Resources is a must read for all students of Tanzanian politics. This book provides the most holistic account of the direction of political change in Tanzania using a political economy approach to examine religion and gender identities, political competition, the suspended effort of constitution-making, the often conflicts surrounding natural resource and myriad inter-related violent problems preventing the state from making quality social services accessible. Economics, Tanzanian scholars from the Fine and Performing Arts Geography, and have collaborated to provide interdisciplinary insights, focusing on a turbulent phase of Tanzania's political history characterized by rising religious tensions, the growing strength and assertiveness of opposition parties, tensions in between the Mainland push for a new constitution, growing conflicts and increasing public dissatisfaction with corruption and lousy public services. The book a and detailed picture of the problems facing the President Magufuli's government as it charts its course to win confidence and mobilize societal resources for national development.

This monograph offers a broad overview of a continuing South-North development encounter in the United Nations. It is especially intended for the students of the subject and for all who have little opportunity to gain knowledge of the essence of the developing countries decades-long collective efforts in the international arena vis-a-vis the tenacious North-dominated hegemonic world order, one deeply rooted in the age of colonialism and imperialism. This background knowledge and awareness is required in the Global South's continued struggle for development, for the protection of the developing countries' political and economic sovereignty, and for their efforts in the United Nations for democratization, equity and change in international political and economic relations.

The goal of the conference will be to thoroughly examine contemporary challenges and opportunities for emergent tourism destinations, share good practices, stimulate dialogue, and develop scenarios in the field of hospitality and tourism within the global environment.

The conference invites conceptual, empirical, and methodological research papers as well as country context case studies on different tourism and hospitality themes. Papers and presentations are expected to address theoretical, methodological, and practical aspects of tourism and hospitality context.

This is an ethnographic study of a group of rural women from south-central Nepal brought together by a development intervention. It details how these women used their collective identity forged through an income-generating project to address issues such as women's property rights, domestic violence, gambling and alcoholism, and even political representation. In examining the intended as well as unintended consequences of an externally initiated 'women's development project', Shah assesses the structural limitations of a development enterprise while also focusing on what he terms the creative agency of the project beneficiaries. This agency becomes apparent in a number of ways, including the construction and projection of memory into the domain of social significance, or 'memoreality'; the ready adoption of transnational flows of discourses, resources, and legitimacies; and the use of the tools of development to politicise other arenas of socio-political life. A Project of Memoreality will serve as an important contribution to understanding the dynamics of women's activism in Nepal as well as the complexities of the development industry.

The question has always been asked why Africa, so rich in resources, is very poor in income and material well-being.

David Sseppuuya argues that a major reason is the continent's failure to turn its natural capital into productive capital.

This problem is rooted in the structure of Africa's economies, which needs to change if the nations and their people are to enjoy real prosperity.
