The modernization of traditional houses in each country may be understood as a process by which various aspects of culture and architecture originating from China, India, European colonial countries and international style were assimilated into various forms and elements of traditional houses. In contemporary houses recently developed in Southeast Asian cities, influences of more nearby regions such as South Korea, Hong Kong and Singapore can easily be found. Even under such multicultural influences, Southeast Asian countries sought compromises and maintained each country's unique housing culture, resulting in the differentiation of each country's housing style. This book aims to find out the uniqueness of each Southeast Asian country's modern housing through the understanding of the modern housing typologies of each county produced by the process of modernization. Previous studies of Southeast Asia's urban housing were mostly on political, institutional, and economic issues, which can be said to be macro-issues. However, this book focuses on the forms of urban housing, which is rather a micro-issue, compared to previous studies.

1. Architecture, Domestic – Thailand

Small Medium Houses 5 is a compilation of 30 of the remarkable recent houses built in one year with numerous approaches that create new and exciting alternatives. Most projects featured in are located in Bangkok Metropolitan where views and land plot are limited. The renovation or expansion house that forms part of a densely packed family is still increasing due to the needs to stay close to parents and the high price of land in the inner city. Staying closer to workplace could reduce traveling hours to work. All factors from land size to owner's dreams and ideas lifestyle create unique houses. Architect's skills and imagination really push up new way of living, atmosphere, health and wellbeing and distinction in one way or another.

The fifth largest population in the world is rapidly expanding. For the past seven decades, both Indonesian and international architects have developed new ideas in order to fulfill the demands of the country's 250 million inhabitants, in line with economic progress. Imelda Akmal's Architectural Guide Indonesia presents over one hundred must-visit buildings which date from the post-independence era (1945) to the present day. The book explores buildings that still embrace traditional Indonesian architectural heritage as well as those whose design is based on practical considerations, thus offering a valuable insight into the works of emerging and established architects. Each project is illustrated with stunning color photographs and detailed information to facilitate an understanding of its historical and political context.

1. Building, Iron and steel – Thailand

2. Steel, Structural

3. Architecture, Modern – Thailand

This volume presents more than 34 exceptional buildings which display the rigors of steel esthetics and show different ways of dealing with structure elements and materiality. It can be the way of handling the existing construction and technology, the degree of details or the dialogue with its main structure and function which makes the architecture crafted and distinctive. All of these reflect the nationwide expansion of steel usage whose dominance results from the development in infrastructure, transportation system and economy as well as the change in values and lifestyle of Thai people. Through the competence and collaboration of architects, designers, steel manufacturers, contractors and technicians, innovative forms and new dimensions of design and construction have been established in Thailand.

1. Landscape architecture

2. Landscape architecture – Thailand

The initial impetus stemmed from my desire to refurbish the house and garden. Once I got to thinking about the renovation, I began to have the idea that a house can have more than one or two landscape designs; it could have a dozen. So I used this opportunity to create nine different designs as an example for those interested in taking these concepts to apply to their own gardens. In the construction of these works, many different types of materials and equipment were used; in selecting them I prioritised their ease of use and their ability to be recycled into subsequent designs, so that nothing would go to waste. Every single piece of material and every single tree can be reused again and again. Every step of the process was handled with meticulous care. In addition to the beauty of the whole landscape.

'Designing Japan: A Future Built on Aesthetics' presents renowned designer Kenya Hara's vision of how his industry can support Japan in crafting a future founded on a unique philosophy of beauty as well as crowd-sourced wisdom from around the world. The book spans history from the beginnings of professional Japanese design in the sixteenth century to the impact of the 2011 Tohoku earthquake, but Hara's focus is the future. A master collaborator, meticulous organizer, and globally conscious innovator, he draws on more than three decades of participation in design work and exhibition curating, as well as deep professional interaction with creators from many fields. 'Designing Japan' serves as a foundation course on the essence of Japanese aesthetics while maintaining a practical approach to Japan's circumstances and future possibilities. Hara reveals the methods by which designers in Japan continue to work in tandem with government and industry to form publicly accessible aesthetic inquiries into how this island nation will proceed as its population ages, other nations take over manufacturing, and technology develops. Illustrations and examples recognize successful problem solving through design, proving that it is a living, changing industry that remains relevant not in spite of, but as a partner to, advancing technology
